Brookside Dairy Fire Brings Out Benevolent Spirit

RANDY WELLS
Indiana Co. Correspondent

HOMER CITY (Indiana Co.) — Just before 1 a.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 4, a passerby pounded on Bill and Shirley George's door to deliver some of the worst news a dairy farmer can receive — he told them the George's barn was on fire.

"It's really something to get dressed by the light of the barn burning," Bill George commented later.

The telephone was dead, so Shirley decided to drive to a neighbor to call the fire department. The electric garage door opened about two feet — then jammed.

Shirley told her husband to stand back, then drove the family's Buick through the door to get help.

Despire the day's frantic beginning, when dawn arrived Bill and Shirley and their sons Kevin and Keith realized they were fortunate in many respects.

First of all, it was not the barn that had been on fire, but the block-wall milk plant attached to the barn at the George's Brookside Dairy near Homer City in Indiana County. Volunteer firemen stopped the flames as they spread through the rafters toward the barn.

No one had been injured, and the dairy's 306 Holstein cows escaped unharmed.

During the long day that followed, the Georges also discovered how many good friends and neighbors they have.

The fire had started in an electrical panel in the milk plant, and although the 20 automatic milking machines and ancillary equipment in the milking parlor were spared, the flames destroyed the air compressors and vacuum pumps needed to run the milkers. And the dairy's 5,000-gallon bulk tank was damaged beyond use. Bill later estimated damage at $600,000.

By the time the fire was extinguished 12 hours had already passed since the Holsteins had last been milked — and the dairy was a long way from having replacement equipment operating to get

Milking Shorthorns Win Awards For Brother-Sister Team

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

NEW ENTERPRISE (Bedford Co.) — With shining brown hair and a milk-and-sugar complexion, Christine Young would be a good candidate for "What's My Line?"

Her feminity does not keep her from being a farmer, handling a 60-head herd of Milking Shorthorns, all show cattle, with very little help.

"My brother Jimmy and I own the herd," said Christine, who can't remember a time when she wasn't helping with cows. Jimmy is an ag student at Penn State while Christine chose to get her education firsthand.

Jimmy is the president of the Junior National Association of Progressive Breeders and has won the distinguished Junior Achievement Award.

They call their venture "Horizon Farms." Jimmy and Christine rent the barn and buy their feed. "I've watched too many small farmers struggle with fixing machinery and raising crops," Christine said. "I didn't want to do that."

Taking reserve supreme champion at the Bedford County Fair, supreme bred and owned at the Montgomery County Fair, and first place in the top dairy herd in the Eastern National Milking Shorthorn Show during the All American Dairy Show in Harrisburg this fall have been just a few of the awards this young brother and sister have in their collection. They also had an intermediate champion at the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis.

"We're proud of what we've done and hope to do even better," Chris said with a smile. "We're playing with the big boys now!"

LANCASTER FARMING
Staff

LANCASTER (Lancater Co.) — It was the year of the 17-year locust, of the first two-term Democratic president since Harry Truman, of widespread use of Roundup Ready soybeans, of continued visits from representatives from Mexico seeking trade, and of continued uncertainty as to where all of the changes are directing the country and farming.

There were a lot of personnel changes during the year also. Even though President Clinton was re-elected, his administration is changing dramatically.

In state government agencies, there are new faces too, with retirements and replacements.

Compiling a list of achievements for the agricultural community for 1996 would not, of course, include events considered important to all.

Nevertheless, there were some significant changes in practices, weather, prices and policy during the year that can be expected to set the stage for how people get along in the coming year.

Nutrient management regulations are on the verge of being finalized.

The independent agency that oversees the state's conservation districts, the State Conservation Commission (SCC), has final say and regulatory authority, but its Nutrient Management Advisory Board has recently issued a final

Happy New Year

Farm Show: Next Event For Farmers

Now that we are into the new year, the time has come to think about the Pennsylvania Farm Show again. Because of the way the days appear on the calendar, the opening of the state's major showcase of agriculture is a little later this year, starting on Friday, January 10. Actually, the show doesn't open to the public until Saturday, the 11th.

Next week is Lancaster Farming's annual Farm Show Issue with many on-farm interviews, coverage of the new happenings, show highlights, and advertising messages from the commercial exhibitors who invite you to visit them during the show. But we actually start our coverage this week with several stories about farmers involved at the show. Dairymen are sponsoring a benevolent "Scooper Bowl" ice cream event to benefit cancer patients (Page B5) and the Charles Family gets ready to go to the show (Page B10).

In addition, to help you prepare to visit the Farm Show, we have four full pages of building layouts, marked exhibitor spaces and judging and meeting schedules in both text and graphic forms on Pages C5-8.

To accommodate our early publication day to meet the opening of the Farm Show, we have early deadlines for advertising and news stories for the January 10 issue. They are as follows:

NY Phil Frozen Eggs

DECEMBER 27, 1996

Prices were unchanged to lower. The market tone was cautiously steady to weak. Demand for immediate delivery continued light and centered on small volumes, and inquiry for January continued moderate. Floor stocks were adequate, and some plants took advantage of lower raw material costs to rebuild inventories. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the East for the week ending December 21, 1996 were up 1% from last week, and up 27% from the same week a year ago. Plants worked reduced to nearly full schedules.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JANUARY 6-12, 1997

NEW MOON, JAN. 8.

WEAK IN THE KNEES?

This is the month for Capricorns, those born between December 22 and January 19. Some of this week's birthdays include Charles Addams (7th); David Bowie and Elvis Presley (8th); Gypsy Rose Lee, Richard Nixon, Joan Baez (9th). Capricorns are considered persistent, patient, and practical. Dedicated and hard working, as well, they make natural leaders, although some astrologers say Capricorns are prone to panic attacks, low spirits, or extreme shyness. Their body sign is the knees, which can be a weak spot for them in terms of their health. Could this have been the beginning of Elvis's trademark deep-dipping dance style — an astrological weakness in the knees?

– Cicero (106 43 B C)

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Hair rinse for greasy hair: 1 pint water, 1 tablespoon cider vinegar, and 1 drop thyme essential oil.

PIZZA SALAD

1-1/2 cups cooked rice
1 cup shredded Mozzarella
3/4 cup quartered pepperoni slices
1 large tomato, diced
1/4 cup diced green pepper
1/4 cup diced red pepper
3 scallions, chopped
1/4 cup sliced mushrooms
1/4 cup sliced olives
vinaigrette of your choice

Chill the cooked rice. Toss with other ingredients, then toss with 1/2 cup of the vinaigrette of your choice. Chill. Serve with additional dressing for those who want it Makes 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If you see a bright star behind a crescent Moon, you will have rain or snow. If the star is in front or within the crescent, you will have fair weather.

When snow comes with the new Moon, it will melt quickly. If the Moon is old, the snow will likely last.

OPINION

American Agriculture Again Sacrificed On Altar Of World Government

Officials of our national government are at it again. In a pending international treaty, we are proposing to give up more of our national sovereignty in subjection to the powerful international environmental lobby. This time agriculture is being unfairly blamed for greenhouse gas emissions without any consideration of the industry's positive role in reducing the gases.

Potential legally binding limits on greenhouse gas emissions may come out of the second Conference of Parties of the United Nations' Framework Convenion on Climate Change. This U.N. scientific panel is considering reports that blame agriculture for more than 20 percent of human-caused greenhouse gas emissions. Among the proposals are such things as fuel economy requirements; reduction or phaseout of diesel fuel use; limitations on production per acre for some crops; requirements for "plowless" soil preparation; mandatory fallowing of cropland; limits and restrictions on livestock production to reduce methane emissions; restrictions on fertilizer use; restrictions on timber harvesting, and restrictions on processing, manufacturing and transportation of food products.

To us, this looks like the naked agenda of our national enemies who want us to lose our most valuable resourse—a world class agriculture able to out-produce and out-feed any other country in the world.

Unfortunately, these proposals ignore agriculture's positive role in reducing greenhouse gases by removing carbon dioxide from the atmosphere through photosynthesis. It also disregards the most valuable function of modern agriculture—feeding a hungry world.

There is a lively debate among respected scientists about the human vs. natural sources of greenhouse gases and their effect on climate. But the climate change treaty is moving full speed ahead with the U.S. adminstration's enthusiastic support. A final agreement is scheduled to be completed in December of 1997, with ratification by individual countries begining in 1998. If ratified by the U.S. Senate, the treaty will be binding on the United States and other developed countries and may be incorporated into U.S. law. Developing countries, however, will not have to comply.

Again the strength of American agriculture will be sacrificed on the alter of the powerful world government movement.

To Attend 1997 Farm Show

Next week marks the opening of the 1997 Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

The Farm Show will run from Jan. 11-16 at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg. Saturday, Jan. 11 is Governor's Day featuring livestock shows, egg judging, home economics demonstrations, and 4-H, FFA, and youth exhibits.

Sunday, Jan. 12 is Family Day with more livestock shows, hundreds of commodity and business exhibits and crafts. The theme on Monday, Jan. 13 is Agricultural Heritage Days, Tuesday, Jan. 14 is Dairy Day, Wednesday, Jan. 15 is Youth Day, and the show ends with the sale of champions on Thursday, Jan. 16.

Food is always a highlight at the Farm Show. A large variety of Pennsylvania food products are on sale at the Food Court. Plan now to attend the largest indoor agricultural show.

To Look At New Technology

Technological changes are likely to have a profound impact on American agriculture, according to Dr. Gerald Cole, University of Delaware resource economist.

Cole said small family farms will have the hardest time surviving these pressures.

New technology is presumed to enhance productivity and increase output. While some technologies are scale neutral, others are likely to be adopted only by larger producers. This will continue the trend toward fewer but larger farms.

Thus, technology will be changing the size of the farm, cost of production, and skills needed in farming. Small farmers unable to adapt new technology may need to consider securing a part-time job or work on a larger farm able to adapt new technologies.

To Look At Effect Of Regulations

Dr. Gerald Cole, University of Delaware resource economist, said new and expanded regulations including the Coastal Zone Act, nutrient management, pesticide application records, and labor regulations are examples of increased record-keeping requirements being placed on farms that are likely to make it harder for small family farms to survive.

These regulations tend to create a greater disadvantage for smaller farmers.

We often hear politicians speak with great fondness about preserving small family farms. However, many times they pass new laws that hurt many small farmers because they cannot keep up with the additional cost of compiling with the regulations. Many times these regulations will hasten the demise of farm businesses that are already marginal, according to Cole.

LESSOR OR GREATER?
January 5, 1997

Background Scripture:
Mark 1:1-15; Luke 7:18-30
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 11:7-17

I had always more or less assumed that, after the execution of John the Baptist, most of his disciples turned to following Jesus. This was based on the fact that at least two of his disciples did follow Jesus (Jn. 1:37).

I was surprised, then, to learn that, for at least the first century of Christianity, some of his followers of John the Baptist were a contemporary and probably a competing movement. This explains why all four of the gospel writers include the story of Jesus' baptism by John. They are at pains to show that John and Jesus were not competitors, but that the Baptist's role was one of preparation for the coming of Jesus.

Luke tells us they were kin through their mothers (Lk.1:26-80). Matthew indicates that John recognized the importance of Jesus, saying "I need to be baptized by you and do you come to me" (Mt. 3:14). John also indicates John's recognition of Jesus: "Behold, the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world!" (Jn. 1:29). Luke and Matthew tell us he recognized his role as secondary to that of Christ: "I baptize you with water; but he who is mightier than I is coming . . ." (Lk. 3:16, Mt. 3:11).

HIGH PRAISE

All four gospels tell us that Jesus' baptism was accompanied by an affirming revelation from heaven. In Mark only, the Baptist saw it, while in the other three it is the voice of God, "Thou art my beloved Son; with thee I am well pleased" (Mark 1:11; Mat. 4:17; Lk. 3:22; Jn. 1:32,33).

The New Testament picture of John the Baptist is one of high praise. He is identified as God's "messenger" of whom Isaiah the prophet wrote, one "who shall prepare the way" for the Messiah (Mark 1:2b).

Then Jesus utters his seemingly paradoxical pronouncement: "I tell you, among those born of women none is greater than John; yet he who is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he" (Lk. 7:28). Is this a skillful put down of John? Or is Jesus here saying something of highest importance to his followers? The man who is a prophet, and even more than a prophet — the messenger sent by God to proclaim the Christ — is still less than the lowest person in the kingdom of God?

WATER vs HOLY SPIRIT

I think the key to understanding this enigmatic statement is in the Baptist's own words, "I baptize you with water; but he who is mightier than I is coming . . . he will baptize you with the Holy Spirit" (Lk. 3:16). The ministry of John the Baptist is a vital one in God's purpose, but the difference between the Baptist and the Christ is like the difference between water and the power of the Holy Spirit. John calls the people to repent, but repentance is only the preparation for that which is to come: the power of the Holy Spirit. And, when John in a moment of doubt sends two of his disciples to Jesus, asking, "Are you he who is to come, or shall we look for another?" Jesus replies, not with argument or doctrine, but with evidences of God's power in his ministry: "the blind receive their sight, the lame walk, lepers are cleansed and the deaf hear . . ." (Lk. 7:22).

We can see this in our own lives. All of us need to repent, but repentance by itself is like the water that washes us but cannot keep us clean. We need power to live the life of a forgiven penitent.

That is what John did not have and what you and I can have today, if we want it.

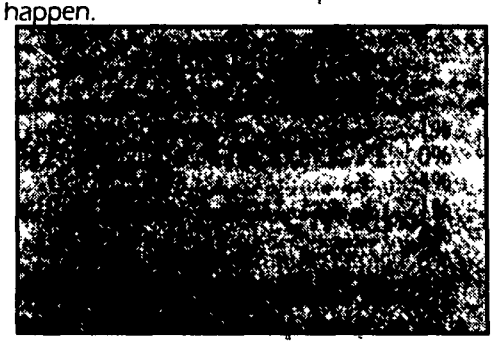
[illegible] Farmers For Giving Us [illegible] To Sell Your Tobacco

"Farmers"

Why is Lancaster Co , PA tobacco crop worth less than MD crop? Our auction has been in business 11 years and still did not reach MD auction price Year after year, MD gets near to $2/Lb We at Paradise Tobacco Sale feel sure that if all tobacco grown in Lancaster Co was sold at auction, buyers would get the same amount of tobacco and could send it south at less cost .

How can we give the buyer at Paradise more tobacco if we get less each year? Also, our charges at warehouse are so low we get no competition to these rates. Seems there are farmers that feel we need option and country buyers We at Paradise Sales Barn will do whatever it takes to save our marketplace We need tobacco to make it happen.



We will Sell Type 41 Tobacco at Auction!

Northeast DHIA Reports Good Year

ITHACA, N.Y. — The ninth annual meeting of the Northeast Dairy Herd Improvement Association Inc. was held recently in Ithaca, N.Y.

The meeting brought together 63 delegates representing the dairymen members in Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Maine, Vermont, New York and Pennsylvania.

The two days were dedicated to reviewing and discussing the current status of Northeast DHIA and its proposed ventures to position the organization's herd management services for the future.

General Manager Nelvin Empet opened the general session with a theme from the well known poem by Robert Frost, "The Road Less Traveled."

Empet reviewed some of the innovations the cooperative has been involved in and suggested that by selecting the "road less traveled" Northeast DHIA has not only delivered better management tools for Northeast Dairy producers but blazed trails for dairy producers and DHIA services throughout the United States.

A few examples include the "AP" program which was introduced by the cooperative in 1972 and amongst controversy began to publish AP records in 1980. The Somatic Cell program was started in the Northeast with a complete report in 1978. NIR technology was intitiated in the Forage Analysis laboratory in 1981. Also in 1981 milk protein testing was made standard with milk fat testing. Most recently, Milk Urea Nitrogen (MUN) testing was introduced in the United States by Northeast DHIA.

Empet acknowledged the record processing system change completed in 1996 briefly took a bumpy side road but got back on track by ending up at DRPC Raleigh. He expressed his gratitude for the vision, leadership and courage of the Northeast board and the efforts and support provided by Cornell University, dairy producers and Northeast DHIA staff.

"Financially Northeast DHIA is strong," he said. "The balance sheet is very strong with adequate reserves."

He attributed that strength to Northeast DHIA being able to go into their fifth year with no general fee increase for DHIA services.

In addressing the issue of the proposed alliance with Dairylea, he pointed out that in the future there will be fewer herds and cows supplying the milk needed in the market place and those herds will have even more diverse needs than today.

This alliance was proposed by two strong organizations, out of the need for greater efficiencies and to facilitate the consolidation of information services for dairies in the Northeast, he said.

Paul Sirois the manager of the DHI Forage Analysis Laboratory discussed the Ohio State University energy prediction system, recently adopted by the Lab. The new prediction takes into account protein, fiber components, nonstructural carbohydrates and fat.

The system brings improved energy values for common feeds and forages and the capability to give energy values for uncommon plant origin feeds, where previously the industry could only use book values. This system does not predict energy for feeds of animal origin.

Milk Analysis Laboratory Manager John Malaney reviewed the new Milk Urea Nitrogen analysis and the growth of that service. Milk Urea Nitrogen analysis of milk can help a nutritionist determine how well animals are being fed and if the balance of energy and proteins are correct in the ration. The service continues to grow rapidly.

Jack van Almelo, marketing director, reviewed the new service packages scheduled to be released this winter. According to Mr. van Almelo, "The actions a dairy can take on a cow to make money are relatively few and uncomplicated, but being organized with a management information system that truly fits each dairy's unique circumstances is the issue." He indicated the new service packages represent the next generation in custom services and are possible because of the changes Northeast DHIA completed in the last year.

Diane Ledvina, field services specialists for Northeast DHIA reviewed the National DHIA changes that were scheduled to begin this week. The current set of National Rules will be replaced by two components.

The Uniform Procedures describes how each DHIA affiliate and its Field Technicians will collect data, and how each Processing Center will handle the data.

The Code of Ethics is a description of the standards which each DHIA member must follow to ensure the reliability of their records.

Additionally, a Herd Profile report for DHIA member dairy herds, and a Cow Profile for individual cows, will be available to dairy industry allies (with member permission). The Herd Profile describes the production statistics of each member herd and allows the end user to determine what value they will place on the herd's records.

Finally, Records Standards Variables are a new method of describing lactation records. While the current labels for type of test will still be used for some time, the new records will also include such data as the number of tests, the percent of milkings weighed and sampled, and the number of test days that are supervised by a DHIA field technician.

The USDA will "weight" each record before using it in genetic evaluations. Ms. Ledvina stressed that the changes will become apparent only gradually and entire dairy industry has yet to determine just how it will adjust to the new standards.

Richard Smith CEO of Dairylea Cooperative described his organization as oriented towards partnering with other organizations in order to create efficiencies and increase effectiveness.

"We look for the situations where we can make 1+1=3 for the Northeast dairy farmers," according to Mr. Smith. "The alliance with Northeast DHIA will create an organization uniquely positioned to serve dairy farms' changing management information needs into the next century."

President of the Northeast DHIA board, Harold Bodwell III discussed the previous year's changes and expressed his gratitude to the dairymen, DHIA staff and Raleigh processing center for bringing the organization through the previous years changes.

"The changes give us needed flexibility. We need to continue to be the best possible solution for each dairy as they determine what information they need and what form they need it in."

The New Hampshire dairyman went on to say, "Information is power, and to dairy producers it is profit."

Addressing the proposed alliance, Mr. Bodwell recalled the speech given the previous year by then president, David Chamberlain. Mr. Chamberlain explained to those delegates that the declining number of dairymen in the Northeast could ill afford the number of cooperatives serving them and finding a strong partner to create an alliance which gained efficiencies and improved service was a top priority.

The delegate meeting primarily focused on the proposal to form an alliance with Dairylea to expand information services in the Northeast. After a thorough discussion the delegates voted to support the proposal to create the new jointly owned information organization.

81st Pennsylvania Farm Show Opens January 11

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The nation's largest indoor agricultural exposition, the Pennsylvania State Farm Show, is scheduled for Saturday, Jan. 11 through Thursday, Jan. 16 in Harrisburg, according to Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius.

"The Farm Show pays tribute to Pennsylvania agriculture, the keystone of our economy, and the 50,000 farm families who provide essential food and fiber products to our neighbors around the world," Brosius said.

"The 81st Farm Show will showcase their achievements and affords them a wonderful opportunity to share their livelihood with consumers on the other end of the food chain. It allows farmers, producers and agribusinesses to see what advancements the industry has made each year and to plan for their future. It is truly a family show, one that's enjoyable and educational for our exhibitors and visitors alike."

Gov. Tom Ridge will tour and officially open the Farm Show on Saturday, Jan. 11. Also, Gov. Ridge will address the Farm Show International Day dinner on Friday, Jan. 10, which promotes Pennsylvania-grown and produced products to a gathering of international trade representatives.

Thousands of beef cattle, dairy cattle, sheep, swine, horses, goats, rabbits and poultry are in the limelight of competition and sales throughout the Farm Show week. Three hundred commercial exhibitors feature their newest innovations in farm equipment, services and products. Daily entertainment is featured in the large and small arenas, with rodeos, horse and pony pulling contests, draft horse hitched competition, a folk dance festival, and a sheep to shawl contest.

Good food has long been a part of the Farm Show tradition. Eleven agricultural associations are located in the Food Court, serving up tons of delicious food all week long. Visitors can buy processed food products from a variety of companies in the Pennsylvania Food Market. Cooking demonstrations take place all week in the Food Pantry.

The show is free and open to the public all week long. The hours are 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 11, through Wednesday, Jan. 15. On Thursday, Jan. 16 — the final day of the show — the hours are 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. There is a $5 parking fee per vehicle in the Farm Show parking lot, which is located beside Exit 23 of Interstate 81.

Green Dragon Livestock Auction Ends After 65 Years

Editor's Note: This story, reprinted by permission, first appeared in the Ephrata Review, the 119-year-old town and community newspaper that serves Northern Lancaster County.

ANDY FASNACHT
Ephrata Review Editor

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Watching Walter Risser prepare for a livestock sale at Green Dragon on a Friday morning, it is not hard to see what a special tradition the event has become.

Welcoming prospective buyers with gentle chiding, a warm smile and truckloads of enthusiasm, Risser certainly seems to be in his element in the old barns at the Dragon. After all, he has run the auction for about 20 years, and has been a part of it for 33.

On Friday, Dec. 27, Risser and all those involved said goodbye to one of the oldest traditions in our communities, as the last livestock sale was conducted.

Co-owners Bill Rohrbach and Larry Loose announced this news recently and gave several reasons for the decision, one of the main ones being Risser's decision to leave the Dragon and go full time with his cattle business in the Palmyra area.

"People ask why," said Rohrbach. "We don't know that much about livestock. It is very regulated and if you don't know what you are doing it is best to stay out.

"We don't need a livestock sale to have a successful (market)," he continued. "Others are successful that don't have it."

It was at this point that Rohrbach stressed the fact that the small animal sale which is held every Friday night will indeed continue. This sale, which consists of many types of small animals such as guinea pigs, rabbits, pigeons, goats, etc. (but no dogs or cats) will be taken over by Jeremy Heinsey, who had previously helped Risser run the sale.

"He'll do a good job," Rohrbach said. "That (small animals) is an interest here—it brings in farm people and is a neccesary part of the auction. That is not to say that the livestock didn't help also.

Indeed, the livestock sales were not only a big draw through the years—they were actually what got the popular farmers market started.

"Livestock started the Green Dragon in 1932," Rohrbach said.

Noah Burkholder started the Green Dragon that year and a man named Paul Stoner shipped the cattle in. Later, Stoner would buy the market and then in 1961, Rohrbach and Loose (only in their early 20s at the time) took over and have run it since then. Loose added another historical tidbit, stating that the original Green Dragon, located in the market house, was originally going to be called "My Blue Heaven," but sticking with the oriental motif—"The Green Dragon" was born.

"The livestock has been going strong ever since," Rohrbach said.

The livestock sale, according to Rohrbach, consists of slaughter animals, heifers, calves and dairy cattle. Every once in while he said they will get a horse, goat or donkey. The auction usually started at 11 or thereabouts (more on that later) and on especially big days could run as late as 5 p.m.

"Recently, the dairy sales have not been that great but in their heyday we had some nice dairy cattle," Rohrbach said.

As for Risser, this change means much more than just doing something different on Fridays.

"I come up almost every day of the week," said Risser, who began renting the sale in March of 1976. His wife Joyce has been with him the whole way, with 20 years of service working in the office. "There are lots of things to look after. Friday is the big day of course, with Risser finding himself at Green Dragon from about 6 a.m.-10:30 p.m.

Risser does admit that there has been a decline in the past year which he attributes to depressed prices.

On this day, the end of an era not only for the Dragon but for Risser as well, he was quite upbeat. When asked if he's had a good time doing this he quickly states, "Oh yeah.

"We've had our ups and downs," Risser added.

"It's not all bad and not all good. We wouldn't have stayed this long if it were all bad," he said with a smile.

Meanwhile, back in the office, many of Risser's seven children and 13 grandchildren gathered for the big day. Joyce indicated that all of them had worked at the sale, one time or another. Despite the mounds of paperwork and details, the atmosphere was quite relaxed as the final sale time approached.

"There's no time clock," one person joked, alluding to the charming atmosphere.

Clad in sweater, tie and wool hat and brandishing a wooden cane, Risser heads to the sale ring at Green Dragon for the last time. While handing out sale cards, he jokes fondly with the buyers for a moment or two, then gets to work moving the first animal about the cozy ring surrounded by the wooden bleachers.

Walter Risser keeps the action moving in the livestock ring on its final day, before a full house of spectators and buyers. Photo by Preston Whitcraft.

It's definitely a piece of history that has completed its final chapter—but the Dragon, as popular as ever, will go on. Although definitive numbers are not available, Rohrbach estimates that the 3,500-car parking lot can turn over three times a day and on the best days—as many as 20,000-25,000 visitors come to the market.

According to Loose and Rohrbach, only the front barn will

The termination notice that follows was issued by Michael Dunn, assistant secretary of marketing and regulatory programs in the USDA Agricultural Marketing Service.

Milk in the Middle Atlantic, Carolina, Southeast, Tennessee Valley and Louisville-Lexington-Evansville Marketing Areas; Termination of Certain Provisions of the Order

AGENCY: Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA

ACTION: Final rule

SUMMARY: This document terminates the base-excess payment plan provisions of the Middle Atlantic, Carolina, Southeast, Tennessee Valley, and Louisville Lexington-Evansville Federal milk marketing orders due to the expiration of legislative authority to incorporate base-excess plans in Federal milk marketing orders on December 31, 1996

EFFECTIVE DATE: January 1, 1997

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

The Department is issuing this final rule in conformance with Executive Order 12866

This final rule has been reviewed under Executive Order 12988, Civil Justice Reform This rule is not intended to have a retroactive effect This rule will not preempt any state or local laws, regulations, or policies, unless they present an irreconcilable conflict with this rule

The Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended (7 U S C 601-674), provides that administrative proceedings must be exhausted before parties may file suit in court Under section 608c(15)(A) of the Act, any handler subject to an order may request modification or exemption from such order by filing with the Secretary a petition stating that the order, any provision of the order, or any obligation imposed in connection with the order is not in accordance with the law A handler is afforded the opportunity for a hearing on the petition After a hearing, the Secretary would rule on the petition The Act provides that the district court of the United States in any district in which the handler is an inhabitant, or has its principal place of business has jurisdiction in equity to review the Secretary's ruling on the petition provided a bill in equity is filed not later than 20 days after the date of the entry of the ruling

Small Business Consideration

In accordance with the Regulatory Flexibility Act (5 U S C 601 et seq) as amended the Agricultural Marketing Service has considered the economic impact of this action on small entities and believes that this rule could have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities For the purpose of the Regulatory Flexibility Act, a dairy farm is considered a "small business" if it has an annual gross revenue of less than $500,000, and a dairy products manufacturer is a "small business" if it has fewer than 500 employees For the purposes of determining which dairy farms are "small businesses," the $500,000 per year criterion was used to establish a production guideline of 326,000 pounds per month Although this guideline does not factor in additional monies that may be received by dairy producers, it should be an inclusive standard for most "small" dairy farmers For purposes of determining a handler's size, if the plant is part of a larger company operating multiple plants that collectively exceed the 500 employee limit, the plant will be considered a large business even if the local plant has fewer than 500 employees

This rule terminates the base-excess plan provisions of five Federal milk orders Producers with earned base will no longer receive base prices as in the past, but will be paid at least the uniform price throughout the year for their hundredweight of milk.

Under a base-excess payment plan, a producer is paid a "base price" for "base milk" and an "excess price" for production in excess of base milk. During the base-paying period of a base-excess plan, base prices are higher than the uniform prices computed for those months while the excess prices are below the uniform prices Using a representative period of May 1996, the difference between the base and uniform prices in the five orders was not greater than $0.26/cwt., while the difference between the uniform and excess prices ranged from $0 45 to $2 81/cwt.

The economic impact of the termination of base-excess plans is likely to be threefold First, for those producers who have been most successful in shifting their herd's production from the spring to the fall, there will be a reduction in total revenue The loss in revenue would be determined by multiplying the producer's total hundredweight of milk by the uniform price and subtracting that figure from the producer's base milk at the estimated base price plus the excess milk at the estimated excess price This calculation would have to be computed for each month of the base-paying period On the other hand, for those producers who have made no effort to shift production from the spring to the fall, there is likely to be an economic windfall at the difference between the uniform price multiplied by their total production and what the producer's milk would have earned using base and excess prices

A second economic impact for producers under Orders 5, 7, 11, and 46 will be experienced by those producers who were planning to go out of business and sell their base at the end of the base-building period, but before the start of the base-paying period These producers will lose the amount of money that they could have realized by selling their base For example, during the 1995 base-building period, 5500 producers earned base in the Southeast market The average daily base for a single producer was 2 933 lbs Based on the average price per pound for base in 1995 ($1 62/lb based on figures obtained from the Market Administrator's office), an average producer in the Southeast could have obtained $4,751 46 from the sale of such base in 1997

The final effect of the base-excess plan termination is impossible to measure in advance of the facts Under the base and excess plans in Orders 5, 7, 11 and 46, dairy farmers who were not on a market during the base-building period are discouraged from pooling their milk on the market during the base-paying period because they would only receive the excess price for their milk Without a base and excess plan, however, there would be no such disincentive Theoretically, therefore, it is possible that producers who are not normally associated with these markets will become associated with them during the flush production months to take advantage of a price difference between these generally deficit, high Class I utilization markets and the producers' normal, lower utilization, lower-priced market To what extent the attachment of this additional milk will lower the uniform price in the 5 base-excess plan markets cannot be determined at this time

Regardless of the possible economic effects which may result from termination of seasonal base plans upon small entities there is no alternative to this termination action since the underlying statutory authority expires on December 31, 1996

In considering the impact of this action on small businesses, the termination of seasonal base plans will also cause a reduction in paperwork Base-excess plans generate a large volume of paperwork for the Market Administrator's office, as well as for cooperative associations and handlers' with non-member supplies Termination of such plans will place less of a regulatory burden on those responsible for recordkeeping, administration, and compliance with these provisions

Statement of Consideration

This order of termination is issued pursuant to the provisions of the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act and of the orders regulating the handling of milk in the Middle Atlantic, Carolina, Southeast, Tennessee Valley and Louisville-Lexington-Evansville marketing areas

It is determined that notice of proposed rulemaking and public procedure thereon is impracticable, unnecessary and contrary to the public interest The expiration of authority to incorporate seasonal base plans in Federal milk marketing orders on December 31, 1996 necessitates the termination of base-excess plan provisions

The Department received several letters requesting that seasonal base plans be suspended, rather than terminated While the Department considered suspending the provisions, we concluded that an order provision cannot be suspended once the underlying legislative authority for that provision has expired Nevertheless, should Congress pass future legislation authorizing seasonal base plans, it could provide for an expedited procedure to reinstate the order provisions

After consideration of all relevant material, and other available information, it is hereby found and determined that effective January 1, 1997, the provisions of each of the orders specified below do not tend to effectuate the declared policy of the Act

"We're sorry to see it go but we feel the Green Dragon will go on without it," Rohrbach said. "We want our farm friends to keep coming. We are rural-oriented and that is why it is a farmer's market and we want it to stay that way."

Green Dragon is open every Friday from 9 a.m.-10 p.m.

While Milking Shorthorns, which originated in England, are the oldest of all dairy breeds, they were not accepted into the American Dairy Association until 1972. At that time, the breed was split with ½ becoming dairy cattle and the other ½ are rasied for beef.

"I have them because my dad had them and he had them because Grandad had them," Chris admits. "And, I'm not certain how he got his shorthorn knowledge."

The Youngs do know that their selected breed takes less maintenance than Holsteins. "And, when you consider the smaller consumption of food, versus the milk production we feel you come out on top," Christine points out."

"We used to house our shorthorns with a herd of Holsteins. The Holsteins saw a vet with much greater frequency. I've never had a shorthorn with a twisted stomach, they don't get milk fever, and they tolerate heat much better than most breeds."

She also feels shorthorns are more even tempered than other breeds and, therefore, easier to handle.

Discouragement over the breed sets in when Chris sees a milking shorthorn passed over for a supreme award that she feels is well qualified. "We live in a Holstein oriented nation," she says.

"But, we're making progress. This year, a milking shorthorn was surpeme champion in Illinios and supreme udder in California competitions.

Nationwide, there are about 600 milking shorthorn members. "As many as there are Holstein members statewide," Chris points out.

National headquarters are in Balart, Wisconsin and are shared with the Brown Swiss Dairy Association.

"Like all breeds, there are good ones and bad ones," Chris says. "To say there are ten bulls contributing to artificial insemination might be an exaggeration," she continues.

"Actually, most breeders get their semen privately."

Chris keeps her breeding records on the computer and checks carefully for genetic qualities before breeding. She accepts help and suggestions from her fiance, Keith, who gives her hand around the farm when not working for the Blank Book Company in nearby Roaring Springs.

"I've tried flushing more than most shorthorn breeders," Chris admits. "But, with minimal success. Luke has been against me!"

Last year, their herd average was 19,812 pounds and their Gold medal herd is in the top 30% of the milking shorthorn breed.

Horizon Farms is the only milking shorthorn breeder attending all three American Dairy shows.

"This month we will be going to Lousville and Toronto," says Chris. "That takes a lot of scheduled juggling. We will be home for 24 hours between shows and we have to have someone lined up to milk the cows we leave behind as well as figuring out how to get the ones milked we are taking along."

"My aim has always been to have all show cattle," she continues. "That way, I can grab any of my cows for a show and not have to call it all off if one isn't up to par."

Chris and Jimmy do their own clipping and trimming and each cows has a "beauty parlor" finish at all times.

Situation in the picturesque farmland of Morrison's Cove, Chris and Jimmy's show cattle are not the norm.

"There are only a few of us who go from show to show," Chris says. "I know most farmers don't understand it, but showing cattle is the best way I know of to market them."

Chris shows one of her favorite Milking Shorthorn calves.

Innisfail Edda was first in the senior two-year-old class at the World Dairy Expo and had the best udder. She was reserve All-American yearling.

Three Springs Ashley was reserve All-American four-year-old. She has a six year record of 25,663m with 3.4f and 2.9p.

Brosius Gives Year-End Report

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — At a media conference in his office on Tuesday, Pennsylvania Ag Secretary Charles Brosius listed five major accomplishments for PDA in 1996. They include the completion of the state conservation commission's nutrient management regulations; the work in the domestic animal health act; the comprehensive ammemdments to the Dog Law; the repealing of obsolete language in the consolidated weights and measures act; and the initiation of the hardwoods development council.

In all their efforts, Brosius said the department operated with the idea that education is just as effective as regulation. "We feel we represent the farmer in the adminstration and in the contacts we make in fulfilling our responsibilities as regulators," Brosius said. "And the farmers were helpful in securing the additional $4.3 million for Penn State reserach and extension."

In their efforts to promote export of Pennsylvania products, Brosius said it was important to note that international trade is all around us now through the Philidelphia port of entry. And we need to put Pennsylvania products in this flow. Because American farmers can produce more than our population needs, we need to export the excess to help keep the market price at profitable levels.

Brosius also expressed concern with the on-going trend that small farmers are not going to make it if they are not efficient and have a low debt load. But this is also true for larger farmers.

The International Day at the Farm Show is another attempt by PDA to facilitate exports by inviting foreign buyers to come to Pennsylvania's major showcase of agriculture. On Friday, January 10, a trade show with about 50 businesses will participate at the Hershey Convention Center prior to the annual Farm Show Banquet. Here the foreign buyers will make contact with local exporters. The next day, these buyers will have free run of the farm show to pick and choose who and what they want to see. To date, 105 people from 29 countries have made reservations to come. Unlike last year when many ambassadors from foreign countries came, this year most of those who plan to come are trade and export/import officials.

In a release from the press office, Brosius said the hard work and dedication of Pennsylvania's 50,000 farm families continues to keep agriculture the number one industry of the Commonwealth. With $3.76 billion in cash receipts, Keystone farmers and agribusinesses are the leading agricultural producers in the northeastern U.S. and some of the most productive in the country.

Agriculture generates an additional $40 billion annually in related economic activity such as food processing, marketing, transportation, as well as manufacturing all the products and equipment used on the farm.

Milk production is the leading segment of our agricultural industry, with annual sales in 1995 of $1.47 billion. Pennsylvania's milk production for the same year was 10.5 billion pounds, or 6.8 percent of the nation's total supply. The number of milk cows in the state averaged 642,000 head and the number of commercial dairy farms was 10,800.

The total value of all cattle, hogs, and sheep on Pennsylvania farms at the end of 1995 was $1.36 billion, down 7 percent from the previous year. The gross income from beef production on 33,000 farms was $369.8 million, down 21 percent. Gross income from pork production on 5,500 hog farms was $132.1 million, and income from sheep production was $5.2 million for 3,200 sheep farms.

The combined value of Pennsylvania's poultry production from broilers, eggs, and turkeys, plus the value of chicken sales in 1995 was $563.5 million, a seven percent increase over 1994. Laying flocks produced 5.66 billion eggs for the year and turkey producers raised 11.5 million poults.

The value of agricultural exports from the Keystone state during the last fiscal year were valued at $413 million. This represents an increase of 13 percent from the $454 million worth of commodities exported during the previous year.

Grower Talks About 'The Sun, Rain, And The Increase'

CAROLYN MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

CANTON (Bradford Co.) — "I only plant the corn. The good Lord gives the sun and the rain and the increase," said a humble Tom Pepper Sr. as he talked about his successful corn crops and his first-place finish in the five-acre corn club's three-year-average corn class last year.

He took the prize with an average production of 200.3 bushels per acre. Although this is the first time he has been at the top of his class, Pepper is no stranger to the winner's circle.

Pepper began entering his production data with the SULBRA Crop Management Association in 1990. He started getting awards in 1991. In 1993 he placed second in the hand-harvest class for ear corn with 197.8 bushels per acre. In 1994 he took second place honors in the three-year average corn class with 185.7 bushels per acre.

"We have increased gradually every year," noted Pepper. "I think the SULBRA Crop Association has certainly been a big help to us."

Farmers Prove There Are Lots Of Variables In Corn Growing

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

McCONNELLSTOWN (Huntingdon Co.) — Elwood Kyper farms more variables than a lot of farmers.

Every farmer watches the sky for weather changes, tests soil in the palm of his hand for moisture, and nibbles at kernels for crop maturity.

But the land Kyper ... land. It just takes timeliness, patience, and a wider variety of farming methods.

Kyper farms more than 900 acres with relative Keith Strait and in cooperation with Mike Lang and Russell Kyper. They plant 400 acres of corn. In addition, Russell plants 70 acres of corn from his own 150 tillable, and Mike plants so ...

Burcucumber Busts Out In Pa. Corn Fields

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Burcucumber — also known as "wild pickle" — has been "exploding" in many Pennsylvania corn fields, said a Penn State weed specialist.

According to Dr. Bill Curran, Penn State associate professor of weed science, the cumbersome weed can cause heavy damage in corn and soybean fields with potential significant loss of yields.

To make matters worse, the weed is extremely difficult and can be expensive to control. However, the alternatives of using no control or not changing control strategies could prove catastrophic for corn growers.

Curran said the vine-type weed, which looks just like a cucumber plant with broad, five-sided leaves, can branch out through fields of corn and soybeans for great distances. The plants can choke off corn stalks and envelope soybean stands quickly if left untreated.

Worse, the plant produces clusters of seed with 16-20 seeds per cluster. "There ... overwinter. In addition, the clusters can attach themselves readily to clothing or fur cover and can be spread easily by rodents or man.

"This is a bottom-ground, wet and heavy soil type of vine weed," said Curran. But in a growing season that was as continuously wet as this past one, any type of field could fall victim. Growers realized, according to the weed specialist, that "no herbicides provided residual control good enough to control the weed all season long."

The problem is made worse by the fact that the vines and seeds pose real hazards at harvest.

"Burcucumber clogs up combines, wraps up in the reels, and clogs up silage choppers," said Curran.

The seed, when it germinates, is very competitive, can reduce yield on crops significantly, and spreads quickly.

Some fields can get so infested with the weed that they simply cannot be chopped for silage or combined.

For corn fields that are past treatment and to be used for silage, there is hope: ... by Curran shows draft of proposed regulations with the recommendation to the commission that they be passed.

The SCC is expected to consider the package for final approval at its Jan. 9 meeting in Grantville.

While many farm owners have installed conservation devices, and many continued that trend this past year, others have been analyzing operations with an eye toward the regulations and the possible effect on their farm.

It can be expected that nutrient management technicians will begin the business of drafting official plans. Up until now, all plans were not officially endorsed by law. The new nutrient management plans carry protections for those who develop them, not to mention that bankers and insurance companies will probably insist on seeing them.

Farmers can develop their own, as long as they qualify by passing the certification test.

We expect to see much more about nutrient management regulations and what they mean on the farm this coming year.

While state Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius was chairman of the commission this past year — the first time a secretary of agriculture served in that capacity — the position is to be held by the state secretary of the Department of Environmental Protection during 1997.

Under law, the chairmanship of the SCC changes every year between the two secretaries.

The office of the SCC is within the state Department of Agriculture Building in Harrisburg and is expected to remain there.

The state's Dog Law received some changes this past year, and though not everyone seems to have been satisfied with the outcome, especially those not following the issue until too late, the laws and the program were in strong need of updating.

Although the issue should start to quiet, we also expect to hear more concerns about the costs and requirements.

We also expect to hear more from some of the "animal rights" propagandists who again unsuccessfully attempted to have some laws passed in the state Legislature that would have attempted to eliminate needed animal-use practices or set the stage for further attacts.

Most of these groups are against animal use, and ironically some of the legislation proposed was drafted by one of the most anti-animal use, and scandal-associated groups, the Humane League of the United States.

It is not associated with the local shelters that have historically sought to reduce the amount of unwanted pet animals and eliminate true animal abuse, as opposed to animal use.

It has a sound-a-like name, which is common for some of the professional fund-raising groups which create new "organizations" with every new potentially controversial issue.

At the same time, animal-use proponets, especially the Pennsylvanians for the Responsible Use of Animals (PRUA) and its associated student organization can be expected to work more to educate the general public and the Legislature about the realities of animal use and civilization's dependency on them, as well as the animal's dependency on humans.

Farm Show Blizzard

It was a year that started out with the closing of the state Farm Show because of a blizzard that locked down the state.

Gov. Tom Ridge ordered a state-wide emergency and restricted all traffic to emergency vehicles and highway crews only.

Some news organizations are still attempting to negotiate with the governor a policy that, in the future, would allow reporters to be out on roads during such events.

Ridge sought, but didn't get, a gas tax to pay for road and bridge repairs and lost road material inventories, because of the snow and flooding that followed.

The exhibitors and staff of the Farm Show turned their isolation in the complex into a reason to express fellowship and most said it became their best Farm Show, because of the attitude and pitching-in they all did, from cooking for each other to cleaning.

Records were set for the most rain in a year here, with about 12-inches over normal, and we experienced no temperatures over 90 in July.

Crops did fairly well, though some fields may have been too wet to get into with equipment when the time was optimum.

Corn yields were extremely high, with the top known yield in Lebanon County, for example, at 234 bushels per acre.

The rain and lack of sun affected hay-making, which was a catch-as-can type of operation.

Soybean yields were also high and, for a while, cash croppers had an opportunity to recoup some gains for their grains when corn prices neared $6 per bushel.

Milk prices and hog prices rebounded from year-earlier levels, in part because of the grain prices, and in part because all agricultural industries continue to adjust to market-demand price controls as opposed to government-adjusted controlled prices.

However, milk prices are headed sharply down again, as cheese prices plunged (the reason still not known for sure), affecting the basic formula price of milk as used by the government and those paying for raw milk.

The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board's authority to set minimum retail and wholesale prices on instate produced and processed drinking milk was upheld, though the issue did seem to remind people just why the authority was granted in the first place.

That reason wasn't lost on the Maryland Dairy Task Force which called for, among other things, the establishment of similar authority for its secretary of agriculture.

To help bring about such authority and to eliminate the business disadvantage created for Maryland dairy-producer/processors by having two neighboring states that exercise such authority, this year a Maryland dairy producer association was founded.

Youth Competitions

In June, Pennsylvania had a national winner in dairy bowl competitions when the Cumberland County team won in Fort Worth Texas at the national convention of Holstein Association USA Inc.

The team members were Matthew Day, David Day, Heath Ocker and John Creek, and it was their fourth trip to national competitions and followed their national second-place win the previous year.

In other competitions, the state 4-H and FFA district dairy shows — which are qualifiers for the combined state youth dairy show during the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show in September — became open to all members of both groups.

Instead of having 4-H qualifiers and separate FFA qualifiers, and being restricted to a region, dairy exhibitors were allowed to attend any show scheduled.

While some of the shows became a little crowded, it was something that should be expected for the first year of allowing more exhibitor freedom to participate.

Penn State

Graham Spanier, Penn State University's new president, asked the state Legislature and Gov. Ridge for, and got, more funding for its College of Agricultural Sciences and the Penn State Extension Service program.

Spanier unveiled an outline of a plan to give the public educational service and outreach program a broader base within the university, and to reach more people in the state.

While the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences will still be the primary college in the university to deal with the extension programs, Spanier created a position for a person to oversee extension and outreach, who would be directly responsible to Spanier, removing total responsibility for extension from that of the dean of its College of Agricultural Sciences.

Now, other colleges within the university system are to be included as sources of information for extension.

An new interim dean for the College of Agricultural Sciences was named also. Theodore Alter has taken over until a permanent dean is named.

Other Academia

Delaware Valley College celebrated its 100th anniversary, while the Univesity of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine Center for Animal Health and Productivity unveiled its new dairy research facility — the state's first full-sized dairy cow greenhouse barn, called the Marshak Facility, after dean emeritus Dr. Robert Marshak.

Other researchers at New Bolton have been working on developing non-static farm economic software and working with current issues, such as the importance of milk urea nitrogen testing.

Mergers

With its Lancaster landmark bull stud, Atlantic Breeders Cooperative is no longer. It merged with two other artificial insemination cooperatives to form Genex Inc., with headquarters now in Ithaca, New York.

Penn Ag Industries, a group representing those businesses, changed its bylaws and set up a possible merger scenario so as to build strength for representation. Dwindling diversity in industry has caused dwindling diversity and numbers in membership of some industry specific trade groups.

While not seeking to destroy any trade groups, Penn Ag is seeking inhouse alliances.

In another area, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative announced it was pursuing a closer working relationship with Land O'Lakes. A merger was not ruled out.

Ag Department

The state Department of Agriculture saw some changes.

Gov. Tom Ridge and Agriculture Secretary Charles Brosius dedicated a new 32,000-square foot state diagnostic laboratory in early October.

The laboratory is adjacent to the PDA building in Harrisburg and fulfills some of the final requirements that bring the state's Pennsylvania Animal Diagnostic Laboratory System (PADLS) into full accreditation.

For years the state was without accreditation for its laboratories to conduct some important tests, especially for the export of livestock.

With the help of now-retired Dr. Cy Card, and with the support of former agriculture secretary Boyd Wolff, the PADLS was developed and work begun.

The system is called a tripartite because it incorporates lab testing, research and reference capabilities of three partners — Penn State University, University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Sciences, and PDA.

While there were of course, other incidents and events that may have held more personal significance, 1996 held many moments of importance for all.

Rumen Protected Amino Acids In Dairy Cattle Rations

VIRGINIA ISHLER
Program Assistant
Dairy and Animal Science

STATE COLLEGE (Centre County) — The public demand for low-fat, high protein dairy foods has motivated a change by many milk markets to a pricing system which de-emphasizes milk fat and emphasizes either milk protein or the nonfat solids component of milk.

This has led many researchers to examine nutritional factors that positively influence the protein concentration in milk.

Balancing absorbable essential amino acid supply to the small intestine of lactating dairy cattle has received much attention for potentially increasing milk protein concentration.

Lysine and methionine have been suggested as the two most limiting amino acids in the diet for the high producing dairy cow.

Typical responses to improving the supply of these limiting amino acids to the small intestine include increases in milk yield, limited to early lactation cows and increases in the milk protein concentration.

Researchers have observed that feeding specific protected amino acids can induce changes in the balance of intestinal amino acids.

This has sparked interest in developing bypass amino acids to better meet the cow's requirements for lysine and methionine.

However, out in the field, formulating diets for amino and balance in order to increase milk protein concentration significantly has proven to be more difficult compared to nutritional strategies to alter milk fat.

There are several factors to consider before formulating rations using rumen protected amino acids to specifically increase milk protein concentration.

The most important consideration is "Will these products increase farmer income?"

This will depend on how much of the product is recommended to fee, the cost per cow per day, the amount of increase in milk protein, and on how milk marketing orders pay producers for their product.

Regions in Pennsylvania where milk is priced heavily on milk protein (i.e. Federal Order 36) may see an economical benefit from incorporating bypass amino acids into the ration.

In areas where milk is priced on solids nonfat (i.e. Federal Order 4), it may be more difficult to see an economical advantage.

Balancing rations for amino acides is in its beginning stages with respect to ruminant nutrition.

It does open the door to a wide range of possibilities in developing rations that positively influence milk composition, milk production, and improve the efficiency of nitrogen utilization, to name a few.

There is still a lot of work needed in this area of amino acid balance.

NFO, Others Call For Price Minimum

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. — In a historic move, dairy industry co-ops, National Farmers Organization, and other national farm groups are joining together to try to stabilize America's milk pay prices to dairy farmers.

The effort comes during a time when dairy farmers across the country have lost about 25 percent of monthly income since September, according to an NFO news release.

"We are beginning to see milk processors now asking for the same things National Farmers has been requesting for over 40 years. We can build on this momentum if dairymen around the country also take action," said Rodger Schlottach, national dairy department direction.

Schlottach said he feels it's critical that every dairy producter in the United States contacts legislative leaders and the secretary of agriculture and urges them to floor milk prices and call for hearings immediately.

National Farmers President Gene Paul, along with other farm leaders were to have met with Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman this week to discuss flooring the price of milk at $14 per hundredweight.

Paul said he feels the move is critically important not only to dairy producers, but consumers as well.

"We need to establish a pricing system that will allow dairymen to keep their families intact, keep their dignity intact, and do what they do best — produce high quality milk for the American consumers," Paul said.

"Milk processors are worried," said Schlottach. "One milk cooperative manager in the Southeast told me he expects to lose 25-30 percent of his producers before spring."

As dairy prices fall and cull cow prices continue at some of the lowest levels ever, this could be the year many processors face alarmingly low supplies.

This devastating situation is why National Farmers and others have asked the USDA to eliminate the National Cheese Exchange influence over the Basic Formula Price.

"Supply and demand is not working," said Schlottach. "To have it work, both producers and processors must have equal strength and market knowledge. The real long-term solution is for America's dairy farmers to pool their production together and achieve marketing clout with the consolidated processing industry.

Dairy Market Conditions

- September milk production down two percent in Wisconsin, a leading milk-producing state.
- September non-fat dry milk inventories down 47 percent from one year ago.
- September butter inventories down 16 percent from September.
- 12 consecutive months of declining numbers of dairy cows.
- 22 major dairy-producing states have lost 100,000 cows in the last year.
- American consumers demanding 3.6 percent more American-type cheese.

Radial Soybean Meter For Planting Season

MOLINE, Ill. — For those growers who use finger pickups on their MaxEmerge® 2 and MaxEmerge Plus Planters, John Deere plans to offer a new radial soybean meter beginning with the 1997 planting season.

The new meter provides increased accuracy over feedcup meters for growers who prefer to plant soybeans with a mechanical system. Currently, the new soybean meter is not compatible with MaxEmerge Planters.

The John Deere feedcup meter will continue to be offered as an option for growers who plant other crops besides soybeans with a mechanical meter.

The new meter is designed for reliable performance and durability. Normal-wear components typically cover as much as three times more acreage than other mechanical meters before service is required. The meter is expected to carry a list price of about $100 (U.S.).

Farm-City Award Presentations Jan. 10

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Winners of the Pennsylvania Farm-City Council's annual recognition program will be honored during the 81st State Farm Show, according to Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius. Dates for the 1997 Farm Show are Jan. 11-16.

On behalf of the Farm-City Council, Brosius will present plaques to representatives of Franklin, Mifflin, and Tioga county committees for conducting successful programs during the Farm Show/International Dinner in Hershey on Friday evening, Jan. 10.

"Farm-City activities present a unique opportunity to increase public awareness of the tremendous contributions made by Pennsylvania's food and fiber industries and the challenges encountered while meeting the world's increasing needs for agricultural products," Brosius said.

"Urban and rural residents need to work together to ensure a better quality of life for future generations. Farm acreage continues to decline in Pennsylvania, but our 50,000 farm families still produce an abundance of high quality, affordable food and fiber for our neighbors here and abroad.

"Without our farms and farm families, city and urban families would have no food, and without businesses from our cities and towns, farmers would have no markets nor processing facilities for their products."

In Franklin County, activities included several farm tours, an agricultural exposition at the mall, apple and pumpkin festivals, job exchanges, poster contest, and annual banquet.

The Mifflin County Committee sponsored an annual banquet with farm family and business family awards, several work exchanges, school programs, community activities, and Farm-City luncheon.

The Tioga County Committee sponsored a Farm-City Day, which included wagon tours, conservation and crop discussions, agriculture exhibits and demonstrations. They also sponsor annual recognition banquets and job exchanges.

Nine additional Farm City committees will receive certificates of recognition from the Pennsylvania Farm-City Council for programs operated in their counties during the past year. These are Adams, Berks, Blair, Cambria, Centre, Clinton, Susquehanna, Union, and York.

MILK AMERICA'S HEALTH KICK

Dairy Coalition Meets With Glickman

AMES, Iowa — Because of disastrously low milk prices across America's dairyland, a coalition of farm groups met with Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman, urging him to set a minimum milk pay price for dairy producers.

The coalition also asked for federal oversight of the National Cheese Exchange (NCE) and a new basic formula price be developed that would not be tied so closely to the NCE.

"This unprecedented cooperation between dairy producer groups in this coalition is a red flag signaling that America's dairyland is in danger," said National Farmers President Gene Paul. "This is a problem that not only faces dairy producers, but also impacts every American who drinks milk or eats cheese. American consumers are facing the possibility of supplies decreasing dramatically."

The meeting was triggered by a three-month drop in the cheese price on the National Cheese Exchange of nearly 30 percent, which producers are just beginning to feel. The medium-size dairy producer with 60 cows, will lose $3,000 in gross monthly income.

Representatives of the coalition included the National Farmers Organization, National Farmers Union, the Family Farm Coalition, and the National Milk Producers Federation.

At the meeting, National Farmers and other coalition members requested Secretary Glickman carry a message to President Clinton, urging the administration to issue an executive order directing USDA to:

- Oversee the National Cheese Exchange
- Prohibit trading against interest on the NCE
- Develop a new basic formula price, replacing the existing formula which has too much reliance on NCE prices.

National Farmers urged the Secretary to use his authority and establish a floor price under the basic formula price at $14 per hundredweight as an emergency action. "This would accomplish two things," said Paul. "First, it would send a message to the markets, which we feel would help strengthen market prices immediately. Secondly, it would tell America's dairy farmers that the Clinton administration does indeed understand the pain they're feeling, and the president wants to be a leader in keeping an adequate milk supply for consumers in this country."

Dairy producers believe the trading activity on the NCE unfairly influences the price producers are paid. The coalition requested the Agricultural Marketing Service to issue regulations which would prevent trading against interest on the NCE. Trading against interest simply means that large companies who are normally large buyers of cheese would be prohibited from becoming sellers on the Exchange.

"I'm greatly encouraged, because I've attended many top level Washington meetings on dairy issues and legislation over the course of many years, and I've never seen as much concern expressed for dairy producers as I saw today. As diverse as the coalition was, they were all concerned about the impact the current system is having on dairy farmers," said Paul.

Meet Pa.'s Commodity Representatives At Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Members of Pennsylvania's agricultural "royalty" will join the festivities at the 81st State Farm Show in Harrisburg, Jan. 11-16, according to Agriculture Secretary Charles C. Brosius.

Brookside Dairy Fire Brings Out Benevolent Spirit

The fire that started in an electrical panel caused $600,000 damage at Brookside Dairy's milk plant built in 1963.

Air compressors, vacuum pumps and the bulk milk tank were destroyed.

While the sight of a burned out dairy facility is depressing, the response of neighbors and friends including commercial businesses showed a fatemal spirit that can happen only in agriculture.

the milkers running again.

News of the fire spread quickly through the community even before daybreak. The first neighbors and other farmers started arriving while firefighters were still on the scene.

With shovels, wheelbarrows and a front-end loader they started clearing away the rubble.

Kevin George telephoned Kenny Van Bremen, owner of Bremen's Refrigeration & Dairy Services, Inc. in Rockwood, Somerset County, to tell him about the fire.

Van Bremen woke up his five-man crew, told them to load up trucks with everything they might need to set up a large milking system, and they headed north, arriving at Brookside Dairy about 3 a.m.

Van Bremen said the George's were debating whether they should send the Holsteins to neighboring farms, but Van Bremen assured them that "in 18 hours from now we can milk cows here."

Van Bremen telephoned George Priest of Priest Refrigeration in Hagerstown, Md., to inform him a replacement bulk tank would be needed.

Even though the George's hadn't placed an order for a new tank, Priest started north in a truck carrying a new stainless steel 2,500-gallon bulk tank and two new compressors.

Jim and Chuck Turner of Turner Dairy in Penn Hills, suburban Pittsburgh, called to inquire if they could help, then delivered a trailer-mounted diesel-powered air compressor.

Electrician Chris Nehrig, a neighbor of Brookside Dairy, arrived early with his tools, and stayed all day.

"Whatever else he had to do, he just put it aside, as he did on subsequent days," Bill George said.

A crew from Colgan Plumbing & Heating in Indiana arrived and started reconnecting natural gas and water lines. They also connected three old electric and gas-fired water heaters in series to replace the dairy's boiler, which had also been destroyed.

Southwest Central Rural Electric had three bucket-equipped service trucks at the farm most of the day, and their crews reconnected electrical service entrance lines that had burned off.

Roger Shaw, new crop salesman from the Blairsville Agway store, arrived with two men and a big truck. They hauled several loads of fire debris away to a landfill.

Milos Sinan, another Indiana County dairy farmer who owns tank trucks used for hauling milk to Turner Dairy, brought one of his trucks to the fire scene, and stood by in case milk from the Georges' cows would have to be pumped directly into a truck.

And helping in countless other ways were about 50 neighbors and surrounding farmers.

"I saw people I didn't know," Bill said. "Most of those volunteers were cleaning up the mess. The biggest job was trying to hold people back," adding he wasn't sure how much clean-up should be done before insurance adjusters had a chance to inspect the rubble.

The main concern of most of the volunteers was that the cows could contract mastitis if they weren't soon milked, so the number one priority of all the volunteers was to get a milking system operating.

When they could take a break, the workers snacked on hot soup and chili and pies and cakes that neighbors sent to the farm. Several area grocery stores and delicatessens delivered meat and cheese platters to help feed the volunteers. And checks and cash donations started arriving.

"It really was overwhelming, the support of the people. It renewed your faith in mankind," Shirley said.

"And I wrote them each a personal thank you," Bill said.

By 5 p.m. on the afternoon of Dec. 4, the temporary vacuum pumps, air compressors and replacement bulk tank were all connected and operating, and 26 hours after they had last been milked, the first Holsteins were moved into the stanchions.

Bill said some of the cows at that first milking gave 85 pounds of milk, compared to an across-the-herd daily average of 62 pounds of milk per cow.

"They seem to be coming out of it," he said of the cows on Dec. 17, nearly two weeks after the fire.

Milk production was also nearly back to the pre-fire level of about 19,000 pounds per day.

At 9:30 p.m., some of the volunteers were still being fed with the donated food in the George's kitchen, and Kenny Van Bremen finally left for home about 12:30 a.m.

Van Bremen later said he wanted to send his thanks to Priest Refrigeration for supplying the bulk tank without hesitation; to the George family, for their confidence in him that he could get a milking system up and running in time to save the cows; and to his own crew for their efforts during the 21½ -hour work day.

At mid-December the temporary equipment and hook-ups were still being used to milk the cows while a new 48-by-48 foot replacement building is being constructed.

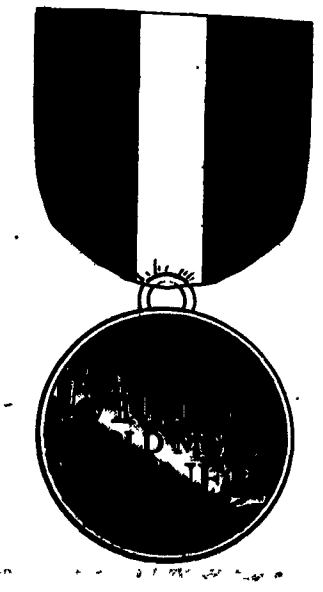
"The clean-up (after each milking) takes much longer because everything is jerry-rigged," Bill said.

And still the Georges are receiving offers of help.

Just recently Bill and Shirley said they learned that John Stoltzfus of Leola, Lancaster County, owner of Groffdale Concrete Walls, plans to bring a crew of men to Brookside Dairy to lend a hand on the new building.

Stoltzfus built a manure pit a few years ago for the Georges, and the two families became friends.

Thanks in part to the help of so many friends and neighbors, the Georges expect the new milk plant building will be under roof by the first of the year.



Vegetative Filters For Milk House Waste

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Some small dairy farms in Pennsylvania are having trouble disposing of the wastewater from their milk houses, but vegetative filters can provide a solution, a dairy housing specialist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, said recently.

"Milk house wastewater disposal is a problem across Pennsylvania," said Robert Graves, professor of agricultural engineering. " Whether it comes from a small 30- to 50-cow milk house or a milking center with a large parlor-utility room complex, milk house wastewater can find no home."

Milk house wastewater, a dilute mixture of washwater from the parlor, equipment sanitation water and manure, usually contains nitrogen, phosphorus, fats and minimal sanitizers and detergents.

"Depending on the farm, milk house washwater only amounts to 100-300 gallons per day," Graves said. "It doesn't seem like a lot — unless you're trying to get rid of it."

Subsurface disposal through a settling tank and leach field was a common wastewater disposal method for small farms, but since the early 1990s, no new or repaired subsurface systems are allowed by the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

A 1995 memorandum agreement between DEP and the Department of Agriculture's Milk Inspection Program gave enforcement of this regulation to Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture milk inspectors, who examine a farm's milking conditions each year.

"Milk inspectors check conditions that may affect milk quality, including the milk house wastewater disposal system," Graves said. "Traditionally, milk inspectors like subsurface disposal because surface disposal can attract flies and other disease-carrying organisms near good milk, but under the new agreement, a subsurface system that isn't working must be replaced with an alternative system."

The simplest disposal solution is to collect and pipe the wastewater into a liquid manure system.

"If you don't have and can't afford a liquid manure system, milk house wastewater can be stored temporarily, then hauled and land-applied with a liquid manure tanker," Graves said. "However, this is a time-consuming and annoying task."

Another disposal method is the vegetative filter, especially designed acreage where vegetation can absorb wastewater nutrients before being harvested, Graves explained.

"Parlor wastewater is temporarily held in a tank and then land applied, discharged or allowed to trickle through perforated pipe directly into the field. Properly managed vegetative filters are economical, environmentally sound and approved by DEP. Also, they don't cause fly or odor problems."

Proper design and management are essential, however.

"The filter design must take into account vegetation nutrient needs, wastewater characteristics, soil water holding capacity and loading rates," Graves said.

"Filters should be located away from critical areas such as streams and ditches. Harvesting also is critical, because periodic crop removal prevents nutrient buildup in the soil and eventually in the groundwater."

Whichever disposal method they select, Graves urged dairy farmers to consult their milk inspectors.

"'A county conservation district representative can provide guidance on design and maintenance of vegetative filters.

Alfalfa To Be Used To Generate Electricity, Feed Cattle

ST. PAUL, Minn. — A new type of alfalfa in the works in Minnesota holds promise as both a high-protein feed source for dairy cattle and an environmentally friendly energy source to generate electricity for Minnesota consumers.

Scientists with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service here have teamed with researchers at the University of Minnesota to develop the new alfalfa. The first generation of the new variety is taller, stronger, and has thicker stems than alfalfa typically fed to cattle. The researchers say the leaves can be stripped off, ground into meal and fed to cattle, while the stems can fuel electric generating plants.

The project is funded by the U.S. Department of Energey. The new alfalfa will be grown and marketed by local farmers, including a southwestern Minnesota farmers' cooperative that also plans to build a generating unit and sell electricity.

"First and foremost, the new alfalfa variety provides a large new market for alfalfa," said ARS dairy scientist Hans Jung, coordinator for the ARS portion of the energy project. "It won't compete with existing alfalfa markets because it isn't being produced strictly as animal feed."

A feasibility study shows it would be profitable to market the stems for energy production and the leaves for meal. Whole plant alfalfa brings about $100 per ton on the open market in Minnesota. Selling the alfalfa leaves as a value-added product could bring additional profits to growers.

"We believe there is a good market for the leaf meal in many areas of the livestock industry, especially dairy cattle," said Jung.

A report on this research is featured in the October issue of Agricultural Research, the monthly magazine of the Agricultural Research Service. The magazine is accessible on the Internet at: http://www.ars.usda.gov/is/AR/cu rr/.

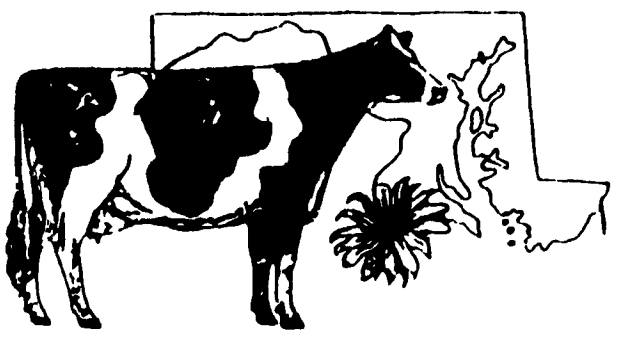
THE MARYLAND HOLSTEIN ASSOCIATION



Board Seeks Beef Check-off Reform

EMMITSBURG, Md. — The Maryland Holstein Association board of directors has endorsed a resoltuion seeking to reform the United States commodity promotion program for beef as it concerns dairy producers.

In a news release made this week, the board has requested that every dairy group and individual likewise endorse the resolution and participate in a letter-writing campaign to effect changes.

The resolution was first presented at the Atlantic Dairy Cooperative Inc. annual meeting.

The resolution calls for eliminating the $1 per head checkoff for beef promotion on every sale of a dairy cattle animal and only collecting it at the point of slaughter:

Whereas dairy producers have been assessed $1 per head for the beef check-off even though marketing strategies for dairymen differ greatly from those of beef producers, and;

Whereas the benefits of the beef check-off for dairymen are not visibly beneficial for dairymen;

Therefore be it resolved that the (Maryland Holstein Association) board of directors pursue the enactment of legislation to charge the beef check-off only at the point of slaughter and only if the gross sale of each animal is over $25;

Be it further resolved that the (United States) Beef Council provide public disclosure of the disposition of funds annually, and publish said disclosure in a form readily available to all dairymen.

Letters of support should be sent to your United States Congressional representatives.

Copies may also be sent to the Maryland Holstein Association, 15029 Grimes Road, Emmitsburg, Md. 21727.

NAAB 51st Convention With National DHIA

COLUMBIA, Mo. — The 51st Convention of the National Association of Animal Breeders (NAAB) will be held March 9-10, in conjunction with the National DHIA convention, March 9-11.

This is a first-time ever event in a new format and a few changes in store. The site will be the Hyatt Regency in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

You will experience one of the finest visits ever in Albuquerque. It is a city where the views go on forever. The rugged Sandias, the southernmost mountains of the Rocky Mountain chain, tower over the city.

From the west side's Petroglyph National Monument you can see the Rio Grande meander through the valley.

In addition to the spectacular views, there will be plenty to do and enjoy.

Some great tours have been planned for the area — on Sunday, a stop at Zens Dairy along the route to Santa Fe will be great excitement and fun for all members, families and guests. A special NAAB/NDHIA Welcome Reception and Trade Show that evening will kick off the convention.

On Monday, spouses will depart for a fabulous tram ride up the Sandia Mountains and also visit a winery. A Continental Breakfast will be held in the Trade Show, followed with a combined NAAB/NDHIA Educational Program you won't want to miss.

Speakers are to discuss ways to improve farm animal identification and other issues regarding the maintenance of competitive genetic improvement programs in the USA.

At noon there will be lunch in the Trade Show.

Monday afternoon NDHIA will have its general session. NAAB will hold its general business session including the call to order, call to the meeting, and the reading of any proposed resolutions.

The chairman of the Nominating Committee, Roger Ripley, Accelerated Genetics, is to report on candidates for the NAAB board of directors, and NAAB voting delegates will elect three directors to fill the three vacant positions.

Those whose terms expire are Bruce Bean, Genex Coop., Lloyd Ebersole, Sire Power, and Lloyd Jungmann, Hawkeye Breeders. Both Ebersole and Jungmann are eligible to serve another three-year term.

NAAB Chairman of the board Bruce Bean will give his chairman's address, and delegates are to hear from Dr. Donald Monke, Select Sires, chairman of Certified Semen Services.

Artificiation insemination technicians who have serviced over 100,000 cows, as well as industry sales people who have sold over 500,000 units of semen, will be recognized with a plaque presentation ceremony.

President Gordon A. Doak, Ph.D., will give his president's address, and delegates will review the six month finances of the association and act on any resolutions brought before the Convention.

The NAAB Convention will conclude Monday evening with a buffet dinner.

NDHIA meetings will cotinue on through Tuesday and conclude with their awards banquet that evening.

NAAB Registration deadline is Feb. 5 to avoid late registration fees. Hotel reservations must be made by Feb. 15 to guarantee rates and availability. For convention registration information contact Mary Derby, NAAB, P.O. Box 1033, Columbia, Mo. 65205, telephone (573) 445-4406, or fax (573) 446-2279.

"PennMulch" Receives Environmental Award

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — PennMulch, an environmentally friendly mulch for turfgrass developed by a researcher in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, received a 1996 Governor's Award for Environmental Excellence this month. Penn State also receive an award for recycling at Beaver Stadium.

Offered by the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection's Office of Pollution Prevention and Compliance Assistance, the awards were presented in four categories: education and outreach, pollution prevention, recycling and market development and technology innovation.

Penn State and PennTurf Products Inc. received their award for a nonprofit and nonmanufacturing small business in the technology innovation category for the development of PennMulch.

PennMulch is manufactured from recycled newsprint that is shredded, combined with a starter fertilizer and green dye and then pelleted. Invented by agronomy instructor George Hamilton, it is patented by Penn State and licensed by PennTurf Products of State College, which developed the full-scale manufacturing process and the North American distribution network, including 35 distributors in 30 states and Canada.

"PennMulch protects seedbeds and retains moisture; plus it contains its own fertilizer," Hamilton said. "Because it's in the form of dry pellets, it's much easier to handle than traditional mulches, such as straw or peat. One 6-pound bag covers up to 100 square feet because once it's watered, it expands."

According to the award citation, "PennMulch" is being widely accepted as a convenient, efficient and cost-effective way of mulching turfgrass seedbeds. The biodegradable PennMulch pellets can be spread easily by hand or spreader, eliminating the need for expensive equipment such as hydroseeders or straw blowers. In 1995, the first full year of production, more than two million pounds of PennMulch were sold, and sales are steadily increasing. The vast majority of PennMulch has been sold to the professional turfgrass market."

The turfgrass industry, including athletic fields, golf courses and home lawns, is a $1.4 billion business in Pennsylvania alone.

"PennMulch already has filled a market need for turf professionals," Hamilton said. "Given the large amount of time and money Americans spend improving their lawns, I think the product also will become a very useful tool for homeowners in maintaining and improving turf."

For more information on PennMulch, contact George Hamilton, Penn State, at (814) 865-3007; and Marty Bradley, PennTurf Products, at (814) 234-0391.

Past Year Proves Profitable

TED BROWN
Director of Finance and Human Relations

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Since my first day at the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association, I have been impressed with the amount of information available to dairy farmers in Pennsylvania and the world.

It is the unselfish attitudes of the members and employees of Pa. DHIA that have allowed our association to operate in today's competitive environment.

The history of DHIA in the United States illustrates what can be done to benefit not only the individual dairymen but also the dairy industry.

The integrity and reliability of the data produced and the reports available through DHIA are a benefit to dairymen but also the dairy industry. The integrity and reliability of the data produced and the reports available through DHIA are a benefit to dairymen whether they are concerned about farm management, herd health and productivity, or genetic evaluation.

Ted Brown

It has been an education for me to be involved with DHIA and to work with people who have not only the knowledge to improve the dairy industry, but also the patience and desire to lead our association.

My job has permitted me to work closely with other employees, the board and directors and the general membership.

The strength of our association is members working collectively toward common goals.

One of the most important goals these last two years has been strengthening the financial well-being of DHIA.

With the help of devoted members and employees, we have survived hardships that had threatened the ability of the organization to continue to provide the level of service that members have relied on for so many years.

This past year has been profitable and has increased the equity of the association.

Significant debt reduction these past two years has enabled us to be optimistic about the future and to continue looking for not only new ways to aid our members, but also to improve basic services that have been so valuable in the past.

We are able to offer field service, laboratory testing, and records processing all under the management and control of the owner/members and employees of Pa. DHIA.

Our ability to operate during difficult times will undoubtedly give us strength in the future years, enabling us to be receptive to our members and to the agricultural community.

DASHING THROUGH THE SNOW

The storm will pass. And thankfully, so will a Kubota snowblower. Try our snowblower attached to a Kubota B-Series or L-Series tractor for a snow removal team that's hard to beat.

They are a cinch to operate using the tractor's 3-point hitch as a hydraulic lifting system. Clear snow from driveways, roads or parking lots. Break up and clear heavy drifts. A special heavy-duty rear-mount snowblower is a recent addition to Kubota's B- and L-Series line-up.

So before the forecast calls for snow, make a dash to your Kubota dealer.

Maximizer™ Hybrid Corn Video Available

LANDISVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Hoffman Seeds, Inc. is offering farmers a free video detailing the beneftis of Maximizer™ hybrid corn.

Maximizer features Knock*Out* built-in corn borer control, derived from the genetic material of common soil bacterium Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt). As a result, Maximizer hybrids offer an environmentally friendly means of controlling European corn borer.

European corn borer presents an annual problem to Eastern farmers, as well as to farmers throughout the country. Annual yield losses attributed to corn borer amount to at least 6 percent — that's seven to 10 bushels of corn per acre.

Visual losses stem from broken stalks and dropped ears, amounting to 20 percent of the total loss. Additional losses, however, come from the physical damage the corn borer does to the plant. Internal stalk feeding, or tunneling, restricts the plant's ability to transfer water and nutrients. That accounts for the remaining 80 percent of yield loss.

Penn State Farm Show Exhibit Highlights Food System

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's exhibit at the 1997 Pennsylvania Farm Show, Jan. 11-16, will show visitors the breadth and diversity of the state's food system, from the farm gate to the table.

The economics of the state's food system will be featured in a display showing the jobs it supports, the state's proximity to large markets and other aspects of the industry. Pennsylvania has more than 2,300 food processors, ranging from small businesses to large corporations.

These companies employ more than 90,000 workers and create additional jobs in warehousing, transportation and other businesses.

The state's main food products are baked goods, meats, sugar and confections, preserved fruits and vegetables, and dairy products.

"Pennsylvania has more bakeries than any other state and ranks first in pretzels, potato chips, chocolate and other confections," said Dr. Donald Thompson, associate professor and head of the food science department in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"We rank second in egg processing, ice cream and yogurt, processed meats and pet food."

Pennsylvania leads the nation in mushroom production and is among the top 10 in production of milk, cheese, red meat, poultry, grapes, peaches, apples, cherries, pears, tomatoes, snap beans and sweet corn.

A display titled "Who is the Middle Man?" will show how food-processing companies meet customer demand by adding value to fresh produce.

"The 'Middle Man' actually is a lot of people, including processors, packagers, employees in transportation and storage companies and grocery store workers," said Dr. James Dunn, professor of agricultural economics. "Each contributes to the value of food products, and each receives a portion of our food dollar."

The exhibit also will feature a series of mobiles, each measuring about 9 feet long, that display products from Pennsylvania's large and diverse food manufacturing industry.

The mobiles debuted at this year's Ag Progress Days and were exhibited Nov. 16-20 in the mini-Rotunda of the State Capitol Building.

Another display, "Food Accessibility," will show various ways that resource-stressed households can get nutritious meals.

"These include food assistance programs, school breakfasts and lunches, and the Women, Infants and Children Farmer's Market program, which supplies clients with coupons they can use to buy fresh produce," said Dr. Madeleine Sigman-Grant, associate professor of food science.

Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences has collaborated with agencies across Pennsylvania to establish programs to raise public awareness of the food system. Some of these programs will be on display, including various activities in southeast Pennsylvania associated with the Regional Infrastructure for Sustaining Agriculture (RISA).

"Safe, high-quality food is often taken for granted," explained Dr. Audrey Maretzki, professor of food science and nutrition.

"Everyone depends on the food system, but very few people understand how it works or how we can influence it with our purchsaes, our support for certain businesses and laws, and our participation in policy discussions about food issues."

The exhibit also will have an information area for those interested in educational programs offered by the College of Agricultural Sciences at Penn State.

Laugh Yourself To Health

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — During this new year, make laughter a priority. It's fun, healthy, and contagious.

Research shows more and more that the Biblical proverb "Laughter is like good medicine," is an effective antidote to curing both minor and major health concerns.

Documented case histories show that cancers have completely disappeared in some individuals diagnosed with the illness after they filled their lives with laughter.

Laughter is a good way to maintain health. Laughter exercises the lungs and breathing muscles and stimulates the circulatory system.

Perhaps the most important benefit of laughter is the body's natural release of endorphins into the blood. These are natural painkillers and act as a natural tranquilizer to relax the body.

Some people laugh easily while others simply smile. But it seems to be those deep-down belly laughs, the ones that almost make you roll on the floor and bring tears to the eyes, that release those important endorphins into the blood.

Dr. William Fry, a researcher in the psychology of laughter at Stanford University, says that 20 seconds of intense laughter can quickly double the heart rate for three to five minutes, an accomplishment that would take three minutes of strenuous rowing exercise.

Researchers suggest that the average person should laugh 15 or more times a day to be healthy.

Humor helps a person cope with trying circumstances by substituting a frame of mind that is incompatible with anxiety or distress.

When Brenda Stallman, who works at the Lancaster extension, faced surgery, she requested that friends and family members send humorous cards. Reading the cards during recuperation brought lots of laughter and lightened the pain of surgery.

Sometimes distressing situations brings lots of laughter in retrospect. Think of those incidents as a child when misunderstandings resulted in near disaster. At Thanksgiving time, one family always retells the story of how one son inadvertedly picked up the wrong container and fed the deboned turkey instead of the turkey bones to the dogs.

While tears were shed at the time over this disastrous dinner, in years to come the family recalled the dogs delight as they enjoyed the turkey feast and of the look of horror on both the son's and the mother's face when the mistake was realized.

It's the retelling of these stories that enable us to poke fun at our mistakes and brings healing from damaged emotions.

Laughing together forms closer bonds and helps everyone feel more at ease.

A sense of humor allows one to gain perspective on situations. Some people seem to see the funny side in every situation, but others see the negative side and seldom laugh freely. Although a realist may find a born commedian a bit annoying, studies are showing it may be healthier to err on the humorous side than to take life so seriously.

Laughter can be learned behavior. A psychologist once said that she devotes 20 minutes a day to deep down belly laughter. According to her, by simply forcing herself to laugh, she is able to feel genuine mirth. Whether or not this forced laughter actually produces the same health benefits as genuine laughter is questionable.

Retelling childhood incidents brings lots of laughter for Judy Kurtz. Those "remember when's" might not have been funny at the time, but later the incongruities of the situations offer a humorous perspective.

Nonetheless there are ways to induce more laughter into your life. Consider what makes you laugh. Is it a comedy? A certain actor, sitcom or show such as "The Three Stooges." Then stock up on videos.

Some people laugh hilariously at comedians, but others find their jokes a bit humdrum, entertaining but not humorous enough to induce a heartfelt belly laugh.

"Find out what makes you laugh, then seek it out," advised Dr. Clair Martin, who studies human behavior. For him, it's watching people.

"People are so funny when they don't realize they are being watched," he said. "Shows such as reruns of 'Candid Camera' capture people in hilarious circumstances."

"What really makes me laugh is retelling stories of our growing-up years with siblings," said his sister.

Family gatherings are often filled with "remember when's. . . ."

These "remember when's" might not have been funny at the time, but later the incongruities of the situation offer a humorous perspective.

Such was the case when one sister "sneaked" her brother's bike to learn how to ride bike. She learned to ride, but no one told her how to brake. As she was pedaling shakingly down the road, the neighboring farmer opened the gate to allow the cows to cross the road to the barn. Not knowing how to apply the brakes, the 8-year-old wobblily wove through the herd much to the astonishment of the placid cows and the farmer whose mouth dropped open in amazement.

Phrases such as "It's a wonder we weren't killed" are heard many times during the retelling of childhood stories.

These incidents and the laughter that accompanies them does more than provide comic relief. The stories offer perspective to young parents battling their own fears for the survival of their adventurous offspring.

Some people are naturally funny. Others are funny because they make an effort to be entertaining, such as the person who retains a repertoire of jokes that they unlease whenever they get together with co-workers, family and friends. These may bring a few mirthful groans, but a few are sure to produce heartfelt laughter.

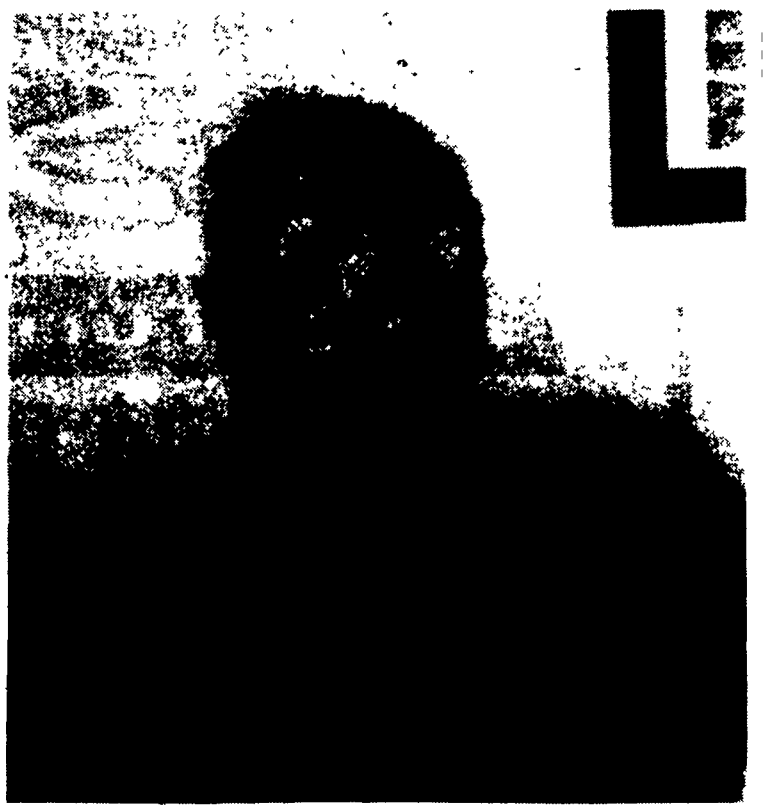
Humor is a positive option when battling some unpleasant situations in your own life. A blonde, who is the brunt of many jokes pokes fun at herself by asking friends, "Know what the blonde said when. . . ."

The same is true for a balding man who may feel a bit insecure about his own changing image but is able to laugh with others by repeating such jokes as "Know why most men have hair? Because God only made a few perfect heads. The rest He covered with hair."

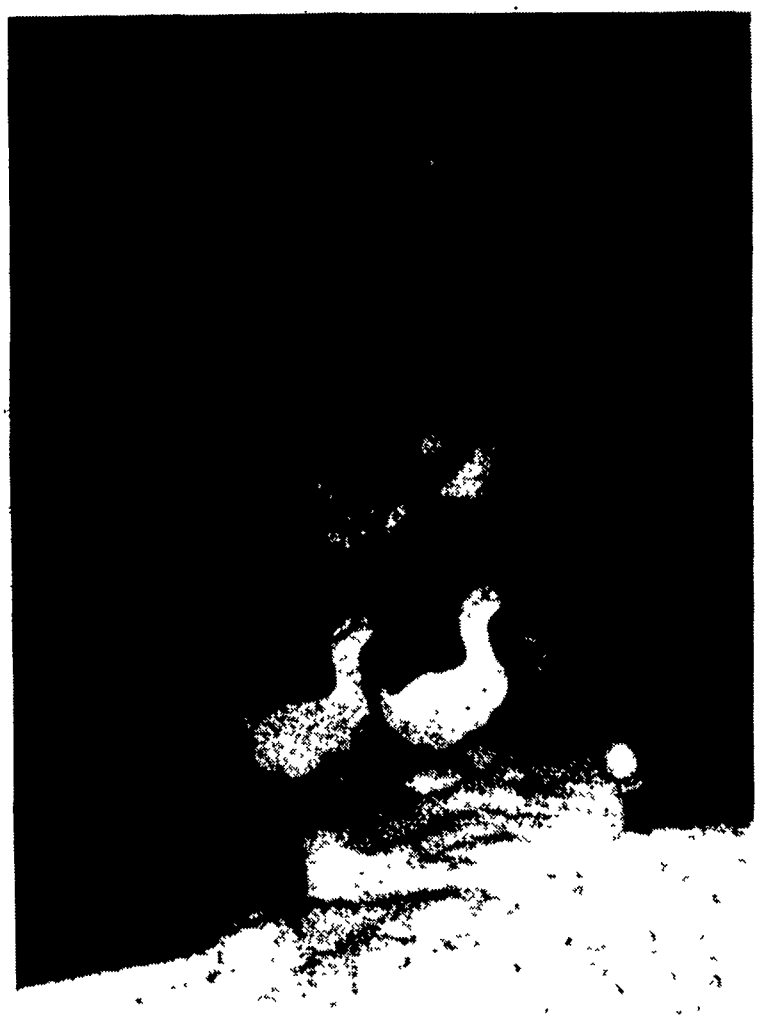
Or the overweight woman who tells "fat" jokes.

A good cry may release pent-up emotions, but it's a good laugh that stores up positive emotions within us.

Here are some tips from the Penn State Cooperative Extension on pursuing laughter:



A genuine belly laugh that brings tears to the eyes and makes one almost roll with laughter releases endorphins, natural painkillers, into the bloodstream. Dr. Martin finds fascination in how the mind affects the body's health.



Why cry when you can laugh? Laughing comes naturally to Brenda Stallman who has taught herself to look at the funny side in every situation.

Recognize the value of humor.

• Don't worry or analyze why people laugh — just participate!

• Think funny—look for the funny side of every situation. Learn to laugh at the incongruities in life.

• Laugh at your self. Don't take yourself too seriously. Lighten your attitudes about yourself and your anxieties will become lighter too!

• Prepare a first-aid laughter kit, which may include books, cartoons, records, video tapes, memorabilia, etc. Remember to use the kit frequently on yourself as well as others.

• Avoid putting yourself and others down.

• If an issue is too serious to laugh about, look for humor somewhere else as a release and as a way to move to a more flexible frame of mind.

FIREWOOD, FLAMES AND FIRE DRILLS

Do you burn wood in a fireplace or a stove? While it is most convenient to have an ample supply of wood handy in the basement or garage or even stacked in the room with the fireplace or stove, you are toying with potential insect problems. Did you know that it only takes an hour or so at indoor temperatures for insects in the wood to become active and emerge, according to The Forest Stewardship Quarterly.

A pile of firewood is an ideal place for insects and spiders to hibernate through the cold season. Always wear gloves when reaching into a woodpile. The brown recluse and black widow spiders are not unknown in Pennsylvania, and a woodpile is one of their choice winter quarters. Other pests can live in the woodpile, too, including termites, hornbill wasps, carpenter bees, wood roaches, carpenter ants, various kinds of beetles as well as mice and voles.

If you have a woodpile that has been stacked for more than one season and stacked on the ground the likelihood of insect infestation is increased. Store your firewood outdoors in an open area, as far away from your house as practical. Stack it off the ground to prevent wood rot and pest infestation. Never stack the wood against the house. This will make it really andy for insects to move right on into your structure. The best way to store firewood is in a well-ventilated shed, but if that is not possible, cover the woodpile with water-proof materials such as polyurethane plastic or sheet metal roofing to keep the wood dry. Move a few pieces of wood at a time nearer to the house for easier access, but again, keep it off the ground. Store your immediate supply in a rack on a patio, deck or porch.

Bring in only enough for immediate use for the reasons mentioned above. No sense giving the insects a head start on their spring activities in your house. This topic is one that hits home for me since we just "fixed" a poor wood storage situation at my home this summer. Last winter the woodpile was buried under snow most of the winter and so the wood at the bottom of the pile was a couple of years old and infested with almost everything listed above except for the spiders! We now have a wood rack built of pressure-treated lumber — up off the ground and away from the house in a sheltered area. Critters will have to look elsewhere for shelter.

A safety reminder about burning trash and paper and dried greens — none of these items should be burned in a wood stove or fireplace. They can cause overheating and excessive explosive flames that can set off chimney fires. Be sure to caution teen-age children about this. It seems like a good idea to burn lots of wrapping papers in the fireplace but it can quickly get out of hand and be very dangerous.

Candles are a sure sign of the holiday season but people are also burning candles all year for scenting/atmosphere purposes. They are a novelty when first lit but as time passes we get more casual with them. You should have a regular routine for lighting and extinguishing them so you don't forget.

Never leave the house with candles burning. Be sure that candles are well away from dried materials — especially as the candle size shrinks. I personally do not burn candles unless they are in some sort of glass jar, chimney or container as a result of a near disaster years ago. Air drafts cause candles to burn erratically, leaking wax onto surfaces and smoking walls and ceilings. Trim wicks that become overly long to reduce sooting. Glass enclosures provide insurance but are not fool-proof. Candle wax can spatter walls, drip on wood furniture and make trouble on tablecloths. Be very careful with small children and candles. They are fascinated with matches and candles and are not to be trusted to understand the dangers involved. Cats and candles can be a potentially hazardous combination, too.

Does your house have a fire extinguisher in working order and in a place where it can be quickly used? Does everyone know how to use it? Do they also know that they should call for help immediately before trying to deal with fire themselves? Can you describe in two sentences where you live? Is there a fresh battery in your smoke detector? (I have a smoke detector that is very partial to burnt toast and scrapple. It is annoying because it is so touchy but reassuring to know it is alert!)

Do you have a fire escape plan for the household? The time between when you discover a fire and when it becomes deadly can be as little as two minutes. Do you discuss what to do in case of fire, how to get out of bedrooms if the normal way to escape is cut off? Everyone should have at least two escape routes. Do children and adults know to close doors to stop the fire from being drawn through the house and never to open a bedroom door if it feels hot? If yours is a two-story house, what are your plans for getting out the windows? Do they know to stay low on the floor and crawl under a smoke layer? Establish a meeting place outside and away from the house so all family members can quickly be located. Tragically, people have gone back inside a building to rescue a child only to find that the child was outside but not easily found.

It is a good idea to discuss these plans as a family and to hold surprise fire drills. While you might be reluctant to do this for fear of frightening children, it is a fact that survival rates are better if people have a plan and know what to do. Make a game of the drill. Start with everyone in their room with the door closed. Have one person sound the alarm or operate the test button on the smoke alarm. Do a time trial on your fire drill, focusing on rapid exit. Review what everyone did right and did wrong and then practice it the better way. In case of a real fire, children should learn to shout "Fire" to alert other family members and then get out fast. They should not stop to get a pet or toy, never hide in the closet or under the bed. Talk about this with them. They should not try to put out the fire themselves. A practiced plan can ensure that your children will react in a way that can save lives . . . and you too!

Grandparent Opportunity

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — Are you a proud grandparent? With folks living longer, many more young children have the benefit of knowing their grandparents. Many grandparents are actively involved in their grandchildren's lives. Interaction between several generations can be beneficial and provide support for today's busy families.

If you have young grandchildren, Penn State Cooperative Extension has a learn-at-home series for you: "The Golden Opportunity — Grandparenting." Each issue will include a "Children's Page," suggesting recipes, art, science projects, and crafts to do with your grandchildren.

Also featured will be "Grand Ideas," which contain short current information items. "Here Comes The Grandkids" will focus in-depth on topics such as celebrating diversity, changing family traditions, and competition between grandparents, etc.

To enroll in this educational series, call the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office in Huntingdon at (814) 643-1660 before January 31. You will need to provide your name and complete mailing address. Or you may send registration information to Cooperative Extension, 723 Portland Avenue, Room 208, Huntingdon, PA 16652.

Hoping to lose? Stick to basics

I'd like to cut all fat from my diet for just a few weeks to lose "holiday" pounds, but a friend said that's not a good idea. Would a few weeks matter?

Well, most nutritionists simply don't recommend fad diets, even for a short time. But you may be attempting the impossible. Even if you cut out all high-fat items, a well-balanced diet could easily contribute a few grams of fat as components of other foods Even foods labeled "nonfat" could contain some fat — it just has to be less than a half-gram per serving

Still, if you drastically reduce the variety of foods you eat, it might be possible to not get enough fat, according to Ohio State University nutritionists. You wouldn't get any in a lettuce-and-grapefruit type diet, for example. There have been some reports of extreme dieters developing dry skin and brittle hair, indicating they didn't consume enough essential fatty acids

Like it or not, fat is absolutely necessary for some important functions. Your body needs it to process fat-soluble vitamins A, D and E. Fat works with carbohydrates and amino acids to give the body's cells the chemical energy they need to survive.

However, most of us consume more than enough fat. We should limit it to 30 percent of daily calories, or about 65 grams of fat on a 2,000-calorie-a-day diet. The average American consumes about 34 percent of calories from fat, and many people, especially during the holidays, get even more than that.

Still, you'd probably be better off focusing on your whole diet instead of one aspect of it Cutting fat won't do you any good unless you also consume fewer calories Reducing fat in the diet is a good way to cut calories, because each gram contains a whopping 9 calories compared with only 4 calories for carbohydrates or protein. But with so many low-fat products available today, it's relatively easy to trim fat and actually increase calories

Besides, fat also takes longer to digest than carbohydrates, so it gives you a "filled-up" feeling that stays with you longer. Cutting out all fat makes you hungrier quicker.

The bottom line? If you eat more than 30 percent of calories from fat, it makes sense to cut back But cutting out all fat may backfire, especially if you're trying to lose weight

National Grange Spotlights Youth

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Grange's youth/young adult and Junior members are always in the spotlight at the national convention. The youth activities and deaf activities departments co-sponsor an annual sign-a-song contest where sign language is used to interpret songs. The youth department also sponsors a public speaking contest. Regional competition for both contests is held at youth leadership conferences and the first place regional winners compete at the national convention. The national winners of the 1996 contests were announced at the 130th National Grange convention recently held in Spokane, Washington.

First place winners in the sing-a-song contest were announced by National Deaf Activities Director Beulah Winter, Haslett, Michigan. The winners were Karen Overstreet, San Antonio, TX (individual) and Tara Griffin and Kelly Palmer, Howell, NJ (group).

National Director of the Youth/Young Adult Department, Jeffrey Wetzel, Kutztown, PA, announced the winners in the public speaking contest. The winners were Brian Ebbersole, Duncannon, PA (14-18 age group), Stacy Ebersole, Duncannon, PA (19-24 age group) and Tina Sisinyak, Concord, NH (23-35 age group).

Additionally, Junior Grange members from across the country were recognized. Prior to lighting the Olympic membership torch, National Junior Grange Director Emalee Colver presented Olympics medals to Melanie Schroer, Cologne JG #9, NJ (individual securing most new members) and Cologne Jr. Grange #9, NJ, (net gain in membership) Tammy Schroer, leader. Other awards and recognitions for Junior Grange projects were also presented. First place State Junior Director's awards were presented to Joan Fidder, IL (communication) and Debra Campbell, PA, received three first place awards in the areas of programming, membership and ritual. Directors of the Year were Joan Fidder, IL (under 20 Jr. Granges) and Debra Campbell, PA (20 or more Jr. Granges).

On the final night of the convention, National Youth/Young Adult Director Jeffrey Wetzel, made the following presentations at the Grange Banquet. The Jody Thomas Baily Spirit Award was given to Brian Salmonson, Wellsville, NY and Kara Wardle, Westminster, Colorado. Other youth program contest awards presented were the Spirit of Grange Award to Dawn Deojay, Sterling, CT, Kris Fine, Roseburg, OR, and Christopher Straub, Greenville, Pennsylvania. First place in the National School Poster Program was won by Cynthia Morena, CA; Video Contest, Jeremy Mendicino, VT; Outstanding Host of a Regional Conference, Flo Carter, TX; State Youth Director of the Nation (under 100 Granges) James Tetreault, NH and (over 100 Granges) Sue Hackett, Maine. We've probably all experienced it over the just-past holidays.

Houses filled with family and visitors, all of us falling over each other setting out food, removing food, cleaning up food. Eating food. Too much food.

Warm air. Dry air. Maybe — someplaces — smokey air.

Sitting around, talking, laughing, visiting.

Then, eating more.

"It's always good to go to the barn after a day like this — to get out and get some fresh air," I commented to a nephew's wife at a family holiday gathering, while we slowly maneuvered around the kitchen like so many overstuffed turkeys.

"That's an oxymoron," laughed this middle school teacher. "Going to the barn for fresh air."

"Now, that's a matter of opinion," I teased back.

"Kind of like our old neighbor who used to say that the smell of manure made her think of fresh milk and butter," said one of my brothers.

To city folks unaccustomed to the cattle and feed scents that just ordinarily go along with an operating farm, what smells homey and familiar to us may be pollution to them.

But compared to the eye-watering, throat-choking exhaust fumes generated by thousands of commuters in just about every city around the country every day, our barn scents seem a welcome breath of fresh air. Even our non-farm, informal kitchen discussion group concurred on that.

An integral and inseparable part of living on a working farm is daily exposure to the myriad of fragrances that mark the chores and the seasons of farm life. And while the odors of livestock waste may be offensive to some, manure is a valuable, recyclable, renewable resource which contributes considerably to the production of food in this country.

We can't enjoy a Big Mac or a Whopper Deluxe or Philadelphia cheesesteak or prime rib without it. That's just the way it works.

But most of our farm scents are less controversial and more appealing. Various sorts of dairy barns have their own unique scents, depending on the method of housing, type of bedding used, and blend of feeds used in the herd's rations. And mixing feed every day, with its ingredients of fermented haylage and corn silage, sobyeans, corn and mineral blends, releases a scented steam that trails behind the mixer wagon as it is hauled from one feeding site to another.

Each season of the year generates its own special fragrances.

While many of us now plant primarily with no-tillage methods, there are still some acreages that need plowed for certain crop preparations or conditions. And the smell of newly-turned ground in early April is as much a highlight of spring as that first robin.

And then comes early June, with its heavenly fragrance of fresh-cut hay, a breeze picking up the gentle scent on a soft, early-summer afternoon. Even now, in mid-winter, we can climb up in the hay mow to throw down bales for the calves and drink in that lingering — and now somewhat dusty — hay fragrance.

July brings the more subtle aromas of wheat being harvested and clean, shiny straw stacked high in the barn for warm, winter cattle bedding. August's sticky, hot nights hang heavy with the fragrance of pollinating corn.

Always welcome in mid-summer is the fresh, clean scent of rain after a stretch of parching heat — though this year's monsoons pretty much wore out that particular treat.

September adds its own pungent scent of fermenting silage, followed by the almost haunting October aroma of wood smoke and a pile of leaves burning somewhere in the neighborhood.

Sure, we smell with our noses.

but we critique with our heards and hearts.

Season With Herbs

With a large array of both fresh and dried herbs available in the supermarket, it's becoming more and more popular to use herbs in cooking.

Herbs are a great low-fat way to add taste without adding fat and calories. Unlike salty, high-fat creams and sauces, herbs combine with foods to enhance flavor, never mask or overpower it.

Here are some cooking and storage tips for herbs:

• In stews and sauces, add herbs in the last 20 minutes of cooking to retain the greatest flavor.

• In microwave recipes, more herbs may be needed due to reduced cooking time.

• Store dried herbs and spices in airtight containers in a cool, dry place like your pantry and away from heat and sunlight.

• Herbs lose strength over time so it's a good idea to test for freshness. Crush herbs in your hand. If you don't smell the aroma, it's time to buy a fresh product.

Here are some guidelines for using the following herbs:

Bay leaves — Robust and aromatic. Use to flavor meats, vegetables, soups, sauces, and custards.

Chives — Milder than its cousin, the onion, chives enhance fish, veal, pork, and chicken. Great for soups and, of course, a terrific topping for baked potatoes.

Cilantro — The indescribble flavor in Mexican dishes and salsas. Known as Chinese parlsey, it adds pungent taste to Asian soups, fish, and noodle dishes.

Dill — A member of the parsley family, dill has a subtle, sweet flavor. Use in salads, egg dishes and especially seafood.

Oregano — Oregano is most often used in Mexican and Italian dishes. It is also fabulous in fresh salads, egg dishes and quick breads.

Parsley — This highly-versatile herb brings out the flavor of other herbs and seasonings. It adds flavor and visual appeal to everything from salads, soups and pasta to shellfish, meats, and poultry. It's mild flavor and form are perfect for rice dishes.

Rosemary — Fresh, sweet with piney aroma, rosemary's distinctive flavor blends well with lamb, pork, potatoes, fish, poultry, and breads. Especially good on grilled meat and in roasted potato dishes.

Sage — Distinctly fragrant with piney and bitter flavors. Sage is perfect for pork and other kinds of meats and stuffing.

LEMON BUTTER FOR VEGETABLE KABOBS

½ cup butter
¼ cup fresh lemon juice
2 tablespoons minced green onion
1½ teaspoons rosemary, crushed
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon black pepper

Melt butter; add lemon juice, onion, rosemary, salt, and pepper. Brush assorted vegetables with lemon butter and grill over medium-high heat for 7 to 10 minutes or until heated through and lightly browned, basting occasionally throughout cooking time.

BOUQUET GARNI

Sprigs of fresh parsley and thyme
Bay leaf
Sharp scissors
Cheesecloth
White string

Traditional bouquet for chicken dishes:

3 sprigs parsley
2 sprigs thyme
1 bay leaf

Enclose herbs in a small packet of cheesecloth and tie shut with string. Store in airtight containers until ready to use.

This makes it easy to remove from dish.

BROILED SALMON FILLETS WITH DILL

2 tablespoons olive oil
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon dill weed
¼ teaspoon majoram leaves
¼ teaspoon salt
1 pound fresh salmon fillets

Combine ingredients. Spread mixture evenly over salmon fillets. Broil 8-10 minutes per inch of thickness or until fish flakes easily with a fork. Makes 4 servings.

Seasoning with herbs offers different flavor even when meats are cooked the same way.

HEARTY LAMB CHILI

1 pound ground lamb
Non-stick cooking spray
1 cup onion, chopped
1 cup celery, chopped
16-ounce can red kidney beans, undrained
16-ounce can tomato sauce
1 tablespoon chili powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
¼ teaspoons dry basil leaves, crushed
2 teaspoons sugar
8 ounces salsa or picante sauce
3 cups cooked rice

Spray dutch oven or large skillet with non-stick pan coating. Cook lamb, celery and onion over medium heat until lamb is no longer pink. Drain well; add remaining ingredients. Simmer on low for 30 to 45 minutes, stirring occasionally. For a more traditional chili, omit the salsa; but for a more southwestern zest, add the salsa or picante sauce. Serve over rice

SAVORY PORK WITH POTATO-PEPPER MEDLEY

1 pound new potatoes, sliced ¼-inch thick
1 small onion, cut into wedges
1 red or green bell pepper, cut in strips
2 teaspoons oregano leaves, divided
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons olive oil, divided
4 well-trimmed pork chops
¼ teaspoon garlic powder

Season potatoes, onions, and peppers with 1 teaspoon oregano and salt. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in non-stick skillet over medium-high heat. Add vegetables to skillet. Cook 10-12 minutes or until potatoes are slightly brown and tender. Remove vegetables from skillet. Keep warm.

Season pork chops with remainder of oregano leaves and garlic powder. Add remaining olive oil to skillet, if needed. Over medium heat, saute pork chops, covered, 8-10 minutes per side or until done. Drain.

Return cooked vegetables to skillet with pork chops. Cover and heat 3-5 minutes. Serve. Makes 4 servings.

LEMON AND HERB RICE

1 cup uncooked rice
2 cups water
1 tablespoon butter
1½ teaspoon parsley flakes
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon oregano leaves
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Place rice, water, butter and herbs in saucepan. Bring to a boil. Simmer 20-25 minutes. Stir in lemon juice. Serve. Makes 4 servings.

BASIL PARMESAN PASTA

8-ounces penne pasta, cooked and drained
3 tablespoons butter, melted
3 tablespoons Parmesan cheese
1 teaspoon basil leaves
½ teaspoon marjoram leaves
½ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ teaspoon salt
Black pepper

Combine ingredients. Toss thoroughly. Serves 6.

SPICY LEMON CHIVE BUTTER

½ cup butter, softened
2 tablespoons minced chives
2 tablespoons minced parsley
2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
¼ teaspoon ground red pepper

Combine butter and seasonings in small bowl, mixing until well blended. Refrigerate, covered, 1 hour to allow flavors to blend. Spread on corn on the cob, grilled poultry, and seafood.

BASIL SPINACH BUTTER

½ cup butter, softened
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh basil
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh spinanch
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon garlic powder

Combine butter and seasonings in small bowl, mixing until well blended. Refrigerate, covered for 1 hour to allow flavors to blend.

On a cold, wintery day, nothing warms you up like a steaming mug of real hot chocolate made with milk. Just pour ready-made chocolate milk into your favorite mug, microwave on high for 90 seconds and stir. It's delicious and healthy, too. Just 8 ounces of hot chocolate will start you on your way to meeting your calcium RDA.

Here are some hot chocolate conversation starters. . . .

• Drinking hot chocolate is said to have begun with the Aztec Indians. Montezuma reportedly drank up to 50 cups a day, believing it to an aphrodisiac (he also reportedly loved the taste).

• Internationally, hot chocolate is the base for a wide array of specialty drinks. In France, a super rich version is created by melting solid chocolate into hot milk and cream. In Vienna, hot chocolate is dolloped with sweetened whipped cream. In Russia and Brazil, coffee is stirred into hot chocolate, and in Mexico, common additions are cinnamon, orange zest, and sherry.

Mint Hot Chocolate Delight

For a refreshing treat, stir in 1 teaspoon mint extract into hot chocolate. Serve with mint reception stick.

Mocha Hot Chocolate

A delicious way to wake up cold winter mornings. Add ¾ teaspoon instant coffee to your hot chocolate and stir to dissolve. Top with two teaspoons real dairy whipped cream and sprinkle with a dash of nutmeg.

Hot Chocolate Sundae

Indulge your sweet tooth. Stir in two tablespoons vanilla ice cream. Top with two tablespoons real dairy whipped cream, pour on chocolate syrup and sprinkle with chopped nuts.

Rainbow Hot Chocolate

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Children — at one time we all were small enough that the elves could reach to whisper in our ears. A time when we could make nothing into everything. You know the story of the child who plays with the box instead of the expensive toy that was inside it.

Ten of our 13 grandchildren visited us over the holidays. But, only three live close enough to visit regularly. Recently these little ones ate several meals with us. They are very good eaters and seem to like most everything that I make. Of course, there is the occasional plate of food on the floor or glasses of water overturned but that is to be expected. The sixteen-month-old feeds herself very well with a rounded teaspoon.

Most of the time, when they visit, we read several books to them. And, you guessed it, they want the same books read over and over again. When the weather is suitable, we use the express wagon to give them rides on the road. It is difficult to pull three children on the lawn and our road is not heavily traveled.

My sister tells me that when her grandchildren come to her house, she simply plays with them and gives up all hope of getting my work done. That is almost the case with me but they do enjoy it when I clean my goldfish bowl. Some like to pick up the fish while others do not even want to touch them. They like to be "helpers" and spray glass cleaner on the windows, set the table, etc.

Too soon they will be grown-up and independent just like our own six children.

Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Society 18

Lancaster Farm Women Society #18 held its December meeting Dec. 14. Nineteen members attended a dinner with husbands as guests at Willow Valley Restaurant.

President Roberta Shepherdson requested Ruth Landis introduce the Speaker Dan Harlason who is associated with the FBI in the local area. He described some of the methods of gathering information and his work in general.

After announcements and discussions the meeting was adjourned with the singing of the theme song, "Brighten The Corner Where You Are."

Herbs

QUICK WINTER HERB BREAD

1½ cups unbleached white flour
½ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon dried majoram
¼ teaspoon dried oregano
½ teaspoon dried basil
Pinch dried thyme
½ cup raisins
¼ cup chopped nuts
1 egg
2 tablespoons honey
4 tablespoons melted butter
¾ cup buttermilk

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Butter 9-inch cake pan; set aside. Sift together the flour, salt, baking powder, baking soda into a large bowl.

Sprinkle the herbs into the flour mixture.

Stir raisins and nuts into the herb flour mixture.

Mix together egg, honey, butter, and buttermilk and combine with dry ingredients. Stir until incorporated. Turn out on floured board and with a pastry scraper work dough until it is still gooey, but not too stringy. If it is too gooey, sprinkle with more flour then lift dough into prepared pan.

Bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes or until lightly browned and the middle feels springy when pressed. Don't overbake. Cut into wedges and serve warm with butter. Serves 8.

Seal tightly. Use in rice or pasta salads, antipasto salad or flavored mayonnaise.

LEMON THYME

Remove peel (colored portion only) from 1 lemon in a thin spiral and place in a sterilized pint jar with 4 to 5 thyme sprigs. Heat distilled white vinegar to just below the boiling point. Fill jar with vinegar and cap tightly. Allow to stand 3 to 4 weeks. Strain vinegar, discarding peel and thyme. Pour vinegar into a clean sterilized jar, adding a fresh sprig of thyme if desired. Seal tightly. Use in tossed green salads or marinated vegetables.

Whitestone Farm Honored As Top Angus Land Steward

ALDIE, Va. — More than just beautiful black Angus cows can be found among the rolling hills of Whitestone Farm, Aldie, Va. You'll also find a team of farm owners and managers dedicated to the preservation and maintenance of the land and natural wildlife that surrounds them.

The Angus Journal, official publication of the American Angus Association, recently recognized Whitestone Farm as the overall winner in their 1996 Land Stewardship Award Program. Nominees for this award are judged on their conservation practices, environmental awareness and educational efforts. Responsible ranchers and farmers like Whitestone understand that conservation practices not only benefit the environment, they are good for business and enhance the quality of their lives.

For 15 years Whitestone Farm has been producing purebred Angus cattle on some of the most productive soils in Loudoun County, Va. The farm is owned by partners Kitty and Robby Robertson and George Lemm, and is operated by Mark Duffell, farm manager since 1988.

Whitestone's nationally-recognized herd of 650 registered Angus cows grazes and consumes forages produced on nearly 1,300 acres of owned and leased land in northern Virginia. Pasture management is a top priority in their operation, and cattle production and forage management decisions are made with respect for the soil and water resources on the property. Fencing, pasture reseeding, multiple water resources and soil testing all play important roles in reaching these goals.

Woodland on 45 acres of this farm is fenced to deter the interruption of nesting activities of wildlife such as turkey and grouse. Two food plots are planted each year on the farm to sustain wildlife and fenced stream corridors provide habitat for many wildlife species.

Whitestone Farm promotes conservation on a daily basis through land use management decisions that pay off by making their operation not only environmentally friendly, but also a thriving agricultural business.

Their stewardship practices are also promoted to other cattle producers in the United States, as well as internationally, who attend their production sales and visit the farm throughout the year.

Nation's Oldest Farming Society Welcomes Moyer

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Society for Promoting Agriculture is the nation's oldest, continually active organization dedicated to furthering the cause of farmers.

This organization was established in 1785 and comprised of a group of 23 farmers, merchants, and professional people. This nonprofit, nonpartisan organization's mission is to help its members and the public develop well-informed opinions with respect to the policies, achievements, and concerns of U.S. agriculture.

A mere 25 years ago, agriculture was far more prevalent in the North Penn and Indian Valley areas. As there areas have succumb to urban sprawl, the number of family farms has diminished considerably.

In its 127-year history, Moyer & Son of Souderton has been partnering with area farmers to meet their goals in the face of an evolving industry. Since becoming the company president in 1980, John Moyer has been an active contributor to the North Penn and Indian Valley communities. Becoming a member of this venerable organization furthers his commitment to addressing the concerns of area farmers today.

When asked to comment on the state of farming today, Moyer said, "It's no secret that small to medium farmers in our area, and for that matter throughout the United States, are facing severe challenges. Today's regulatory environment, along with the pressures of competing with large corporate farms, means that farmers need all of the help they can get. I look forward to making a positive contribution to their cause through this outstanding organization."

AgrAbility Keeps Kempers In Farming

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The AgrAbility Project, a joint effort of Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Easter Seal Society of Central Pennsylvania, is helping farmers with disabilities to remain active in farming.

David and Marina Kemper of rural Huntingdon had a dream — that David would retire from his job as traveling salesman in 1997 and take up dairy farming full time. They purchased a 77-acre farm and got their dairy herd started. Their oldest son, Gabriel, planned to help with the operation.

Their dream almost ended in May 1995 when David was rear-ended while on the road for his sales job. The accident left him with severe chronic pain, degenerative bone disease, and nerve damage. Specialists told him he eventually would be in a wheelchair.

For a while, it seemed the dairy operation would have to be sold. Their son took a job off the farm. But the Kempers were determined to keep trying. "I really wanted to milk my cows," Kemper says. "I had a herd of heifers that would be ready to milk soon, and I made up my mind that I would crawl on this farm if that's what it came to."

He didn't have to crawl. Instead, he now sists upright in his tractor long enough to do a fair amount of work, thanks to a special shock-absoring tractor seat. His regular seat brought unbearable pain within minutes. He also has a special rear-view mirror that helps him maneuver without pain and a skid loader that enables him to feed his livestock.

The Kempers learned about this equipment through the AgrAbility Project, managed in Pennsylvania by Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Easter Seal Society of Central Pennsylvania, a subsidiary of Home Nursing Agency.

The Pennsylvania project is part of a national information and technology network for farmers, farm workers and family members who are continuing to farm despite ongoing physical or medical difficulties.

The Kempers discovered the project while attending a farm stress management workshop sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension in Huntingdon County. David's physicians at the Hershey Medical Center asked him to attend a stress class to help cope with his accident-related injuries.

"At the workshop, extension staff asked my wife, Marina, if I would be interested in the AgrAbility Project," Kemper expalins. "I said I didn't want any help, but Marina said, 'yes.' She knows I'm a hard case."

Douglas Schaufler, AgrAbility project manager at Penn State, visited them a few days later, explained the program and left a book filled with examples of devices that have helped others remain in farming.

After Kemper selected a few items he thought would help, Schaufler contacted the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation, which provided the funding for the equipment. Schaufler also recommended additional changes in Kemper's operations, such as moving milk by pipeline.

"Now I can do 90 percent of my work, instead of the 10 percent that I did after the injury," Kemper says. "Everything AgrAbility did for me was wonderful. They really know what they're doing. I would have been on Social Security, but I didn't want to do that. I wanted to continue working. Now, they tell me that in 10 years I'll be in a wheelchair and that's okay, but if I can get around now, I want to.

"I'm so grateful that my wife told them to come. If it were up to me, I would have never asked for help. My farm would have been sold, and my life's dream would have been down the drain."

A Charles "family portrait" of sorts — Crystal, 17, right, together with brothers Eric, 15, left, and Philip, 11 and the hogs they will show at this year's Farm Show. They have lots of help from parents Cliff and Nancy.

Eric, center, and Philip, right, both enjoy the showmanship championships. Keeping eye on the judge and making sure the hog isn't lost in some corner are what makes showing so much fun for them. Crystal, left, and Eric began showing about six years ago. "Dad had done it when he was young and he thought it was fun and wanted us to try it," said Crystal.

Charles Family Returns To The Fun Of Farm Show

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — "It's fun to see what you can do with what you have," said Crystal Charles.

Moments before, Crystal was busy using a cane, a bucket of feed, and a lot of coaxing to get her hogs set up at the edge of a wheat field for a "family portrait" of sorts — herself together with brothers Eric and Philip and the hogs they will show at this year's Farm Show.

Crystal, 17, was preparing for the junior swine show with brothers Eric, 15, and Philip, 11, at their hog farm southwest of Lancaster. They have lots of help from parents Cliff and Nancy.

The Charles family spoke to Lancaster Farming about the fun times they had showing pigs in years past. And they remembered a lot of fond shows — especially this year's West Lampeter Community Fair, where Philip won grand champion hog.

Of course, they remembered the competition at the Lancaster County 4-H Swine Roundup in August, too.

Crystal remembered her fondness for Lampeter. She won grand champion twice at the heralded farm show event for the county.

"But it doesn't matter whether you win or not," she said. "It's still a lot of fun."

Crystal and Eric began their 4-H show experience with the local fairs about six years ago. Since then, they've attended the Farm Show a few times and placed high enough to have hogs sold between $250-$300 a head, according to their dad, Cliff.

But they're returning to Farm Show in a big way.

Crystal believes the family has a "decent" shot at a high placing at this year's farm show. According to her dad, the hogs are different in terms of greater muscling, although a cross of York, Large White, Hamp, Duroc, and Pietrain is in the "mix."

They manage about 250 sows on the farrow-to-finish farm. From there, according to Crystal, her father helps pick the show pigs.

"We don't breed them for show pigs," he said. "It's our commercial hogs — we sell them to market. We breed them, but it's not like we decide which breeds to use. We buy our gilts and our boars, and whatever comes out of those we use.

"We just use what we have here," said Cliff.

Crystal said she and her brothers exercise the hogs every day.

"We just take them out every once in a while, like we did here today," she said. They walk the hogs "a few laps around the buildings," Eric said.

Crystal said the hogs are walked around the feed barns to build up their endurance. She said, "They usually stay together. They go crazy if they get by themselves."

It also helps to place them with other pigs, because in groups they are easier to manage, according to Crystal.

"Sometimes you have one that's kind of irritable and does what he wants," she said. "But most times they're easygoing."

When winning, the money from the ribbons and the sale goes into a pooled fund for Crystal, Eric, and Philip. Then it is divided equally and placed in savings.

4-H "tells you what to look for, but we grew up with it too," said Crystal.

Does she have a favorite show? "They're all a lot of fun. I like them all."

One year Crystal had a hog that simply grew too fast, which was disappointing because it didn't qualify. Last time at Farm Show, two years ago, none of the Charles made the sale. "We all came home, disappointed," said Crystal.

Eric and Philip both enjoy the showmanship championships. Keeping the eye on the judge and making sure the hog isn't lost in some corner are what makes showing so much fun for them.

Crystal and Eric began showing about six years ago. "Dad had done it when he was young and he thought it was fun and wanted us to try it," said Crystal. "He really wanted me to do it earlier, but I thought I'd rather wait until Eric and I could (show) together. We talked about it the year before he was old enough to do it and that next year we started."

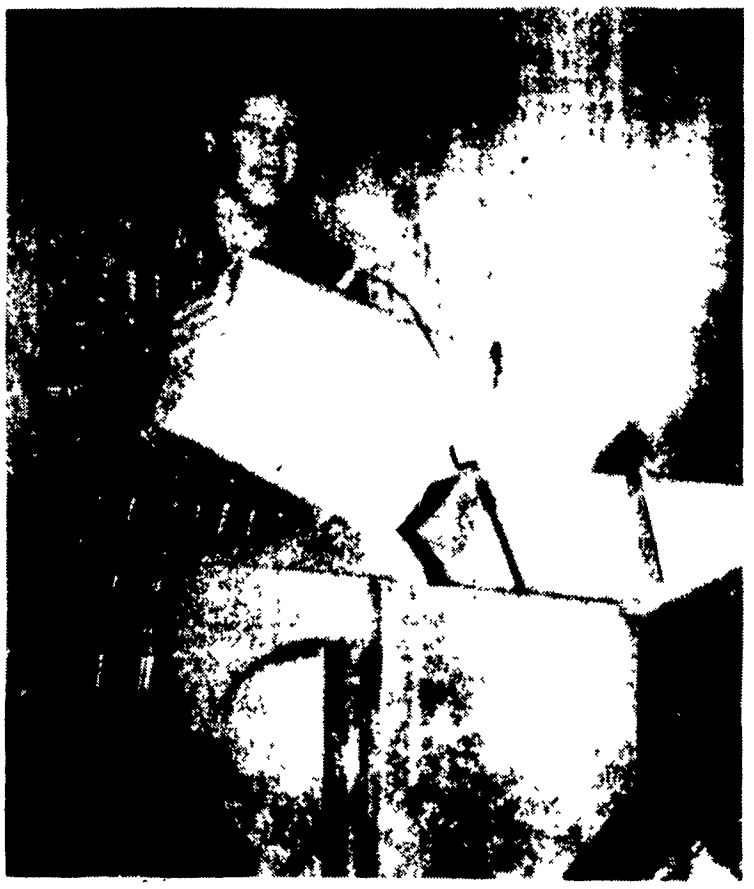
"It's the people. There are certain people you see pretty much at all the shows, and that might be the only time you see them, too," she said. "You also feel like you're a part of the Farm Show, you're not just an onlooker."

Crystal also enjoys the respect that the show exhibitors get from the public. And when a hog wants to go through crowded aisles, she said it is fun when she sees "the pig go barging through all the people."

Philip recalled one show in which some preschoolers wanted to pet the hogs. One of the teachers told a child who reached in to pet the hog, "Don't, they bite." Immediately after, one lady came along and when a little boy reached his hand in, she told him, "Pet him, they don't bite."

For all that, the show experience is most valuable to the 4-H members.

According to their mother, Nancy Charles, "It's fun, whether we win or lose. They just enjoy the experience. They're not doing it to win."



When winning, the money from the ribbons and the sale goes into a pooled fund for Crystal, Eric, and Philip. Then it is divided equally and placed in savings. The 4-H'ers learn a lot about picking out hogs from being members. They learn about "muscles, trim, and leanness," according to Eric, who places feed.

Master Gardeners Share Their Expertise

Gardening is one of the most popular outdoor leisure activities. Surveys have shown that more people enjoy gardening than golfing, tennis or biking. Gardening not only provides us with fresh vegetables, fruits and flowers, it also is very therapeutic and is good exercise.

However, like any special interest or hobby, there is always a lot to learn and many problems to solve. In many counties in Pennsylvania, gardeners can call their local county extension office and have their plant-related questions answered by Master Gardeners.

Master Gardeners are members of local communities. They take an active interest in their lawns, trees, shrubs, flowers and gardens. What sets them apart from other home gardeners is their special training in horticulture. They have received special training through Penn State Cooperative Extension called the Penn State Master Gardening Program. This program offers 40 hours of instruction that covers topics on lawn care; ornamental trees and shrubs; insect, disease, and weed control; soil and plant nutrition; vegetable gardening; houseplants; fruits; and garden flowers.

In exchange for training, participants are asked to volunteer time to their county extension program. The type of service done by Master Gardeners varies from county to county. York County's Master Gardeners answer telephone requests for gardening information. Others staff plant clinics and displays or host gardening seminars. Master Gardeners also speak to local groups, assist with 4-H garden projects, establish and maintain community gardens and farmers' markets, participate in city beautification projects, help with horticulture therapy projects at nursing homes and many other activities.

The Master Gardener program is not exclusive to Pennsylvania. It began in 1972 in Washington State. A county extension agent developed the concept of training volunteers to help with the high demand for horticulture information. The program was very successful and word of the program spread. Today, there are more than 45,000 Master Gardeners in 45 states and four Canadian provinces.

The Master Gardeners program in York County was piloted in 1986. To date, 2,000 people in 55 states of Pennsylvania 67 counties have become Penn State Master Gardeners.

For more information, or a list of Master Gardeners in your area, contact Penn State Cooperative Extension at (717) 840-7408.

Sorbet Is Hot But Real Appeal Is Cool

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Sorbet, a water-based frozen dessert that does not use dairy products as an ingredient, is poised to become a hot marketing item because manufacturers can trumpet the claim the dessert is "fat-free" or "no-fat."

Those claims are all true, says Arun Kilara, professor of food science in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. Because sorbets contain no dairy products, no fat is used in its manufacture. That doesn't mean, however, that sorbets are not fattening.

"Sorbets contain large amounts of sugar, which is metabolized by the body into fat unless you burn off the extra calories by exercise," Kilara says. "In fact, the carloric contents of sorbet and ice cream are not very far apart."

Kilara, who is preparing to discuss sorbet, ice cream bars, why there is no such thing as plain vanilla, and a host of other topics at Penn State's Ice Cream Short Course January 6-16 at the University Park campus, says sorbet is nothing new. He points out that sorbet has been around almost as long as ice cream.

"Sorbets were called water ice or Italian water ice, which doesn't have a lot of pizzazz as a brand name," Kilara says. "In Italian, the word for 'water ice' is 'sorbetto,' so the word became a marketing term that adds a little razzle dazzle appeal."

Kilara points out that only American manufacturers use the term "sorbet" to market flavored water ice products. In Europe and Asia, the term takes in both sherbet, which is ice cream made with reduced amounts of dairy products, and water ices.

Sorbet, according to the International Ice Cream Association, is the fastest growing category of the frozen dessert market. Although sales are up, Kilara says sorbet will never replace ice cream as a consumer favorite.

"There are three factors that differentiate sorbet," Kilara says. "They are sweetness, flavor and ice crystal size. Sorbet will feel a little coarser than ice cream, and that in turn creates a different taste."

Ironically, Kilara cites the differences in taste between ice cream and sorbet as the reason sorbet is destined to remain a niche product rather than a dominating dessert trend. To consumers, he explains, sorbet simply tastes colder than ice cream.

"Ice cream contains relatively high amounts of fat," Kilara says. "One of the qualities of fat is its insulating effect — as you eat ice cream, it feels warmer in your mouth. Sorbet has larger ice crystals and no fat, and as you eat it the larger ice crystals melt, releasing flavor in a different way. It feels more refreshing and colder when you eat it."

If the differences in taste between sorbet and ice cream are not crystal clear, Kilara points to a consumer trend that might send a chill down the spine of a sorbet maker. "Consumption of sorbets falls off dramatically in the winter months," Kilara says. "It is primarily a seasonal product."

Marty Stutzman Receives American Farmer Degree

GAY N. BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — Marty Stutzman, in November was the only Somerset County FFA member to receive the American FFA Degree at the National FFA Convention held in Kansas City, Mo.

The 20-year-old Meyersdale FFA Chapter member has continued his active supervised work experience on Friendship Farms, at RD3, where he hopes, one day, to become its manager. His parents are Jim and Doris (Miller) Stutzman.

Rolling over the valley at the southern base of Hunsrick Summit, and around the energetic waters of the Casselman River, where increased precipitation and a man-designed project has curbed earlier aquatic damage from old mine drainage, Stutzman sees the ancestral lands. Lands owned by his maternal forebears for more than two centuries.

That's why, besides working at home, his pursuit of a degree in agricultural business management at the Garrett Community College in McHenry, Md., is vitally important to the preservation of this heritage. Knowledge and experience will carry it into the fast-approaching 21st Century.

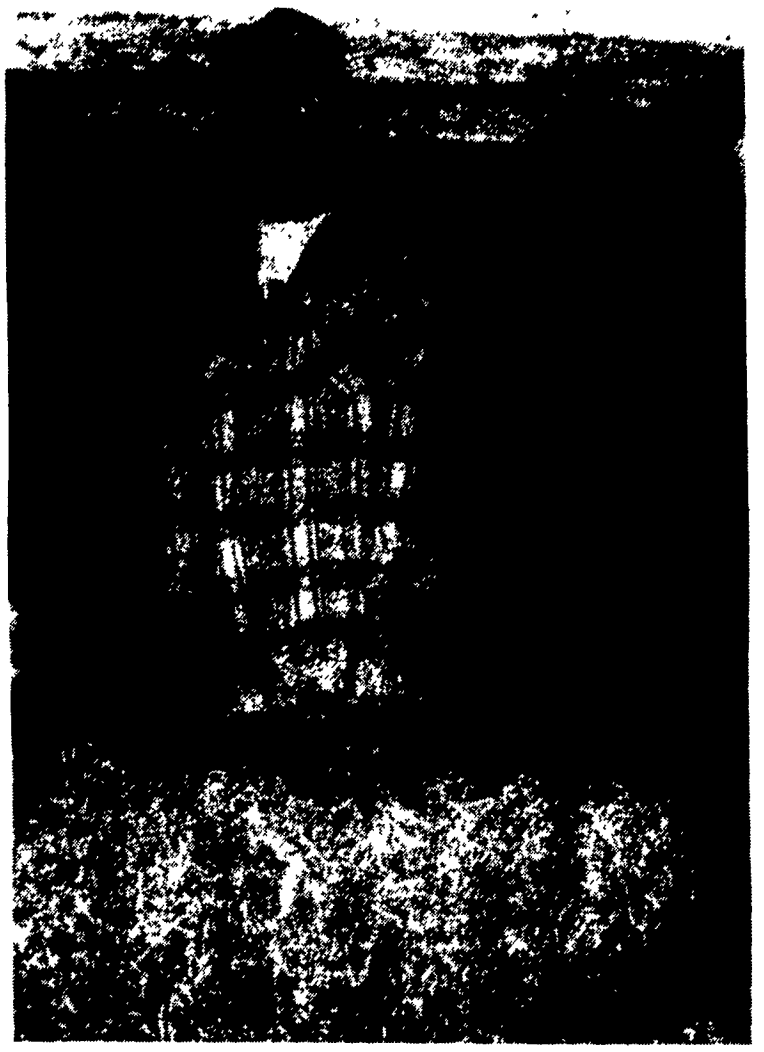
"I think growing up on a farm has really helped me in college because I already had a grasp on agriculture," reported the full-time student.

"I tried going to school part time but it didn't work. I was still working too much on the farm," he said.

Stutzman's mandatory 2,000 hours of supervised work were completed under supervision of his dad, a junior high science teacher in the Meyersdale Area School District. It included operating the 40-head Holstein dairy and the 15 to 20 head of beef animals they keep, besides raising crops.

Partnering is primarily what the son and his dad do.

"Dad won't make a major decision without me and I won't without him," said Stutzman, now the third American Degree recipient in the Meyersdale FFA Chapter.



At Friendship Farms, Meyersdale, Somerset County, square bales of hay are more practical for the small Holstein operation run by Marty Stutzman and his dad, Jim Stutzman.

"My mom does most of the accounting." He added with a twinkle, "My dad makes the bills and she pays them."

On an average, the stockpile of square hay bales is some 20,000. The square bale issue entwined a good debate in Stutzman's classes where the round bales were touted as having the greatest efficiency.

"Some things that are taught aren't as realistic for some farmers as for others," he observed about round bales as opposed to the square ones. "Some things will work and others won't."

"If you have the facilities, it is an advantage," he said. "Square bales, however, are more marketable than the round ones."

A few things that do work, however, are lessons on keeping records and doing income taxes. Livestock and crop management, understanding market trends and changing technology are important tools for any farmer according to the Meyersdale Young Farmers Association member.

"We had to set up a budget for a farm," he said, explaining that some classes were taken on-line through the University of Maryland.

Stutzman, who with his sister, Becky, a teacher, still live in the big old farmhouse with their folks, says "It's nice to have a roof over your head and food in your mouth."

The family chuckles when they relate, but have no proof of the legend that "the farm was purchased for two bottles of whiskey and 14 deerskins."

Peter Miller, one of Stutzman's great-grandfathers ironically, was married to a Mary Stutzman from 1756 to 1818.

Next door, another big house was built in increments. Half of its bricks, reportedly, were poured in one winter and the other half, the following winter. Then, some onery cats, trespassing, ran through the forms. To this day their paw prints remain preserved in several of the bricks, said the eighth generation descendant.

Stutzman, who always played FFA sports, earned his state FFA degree as a high school senior. He still joins various community league, sport teams, and is a Meyersdale Church of the Brethren member.

Bottle-feeding a three-week-old beef calf is one of numerous tasks adding up to at least 2,000 hours of supervised work for Marty Stutzman, the only FFA member in Somerset County to receive the American FFA Degree at the 69th FFA National Convention, held in Kansas City, Mo.

Joel has been involved in the Manor Chapter for four years. He haqs held the offices of chaplain, treasurer, and is the chapter's president. He has been on several committees including earnings, savings and investments, public relations, banquet award presenter, and the horse show.

His supervised agriculture experience projects have included market swine production, diversified crops, and on-farm work experience. Other awards Joel has received include the Star Greenhand Award. Star Chapter FFA Award, and the Star Red Rose. He has also been recognized on the chapter level for his excellence in project management and record-keeping.

Joel has been involved in two career development events on the national level in Kansas City, Mo.

Joel Frey

To be considered for the Star Keystone in Agriculture Production award Joel was required to fill out an application and was interviewed by a panel of judges at the chapter, county, and regional levels. On January 13, during the Pennsylvania State Farm Show, he will be competing against senior FFA members from across Pennsylvania for the Pennsylvania Star Keystone in Agriculture Production.

In the future, Joel plans to attend a two-year school majoring in agriculture business and then to return to the family farm.

During Penn State's Ag Progress Days, August 13-15, the Manor FFA Chaper received a safety award.

Manor placed second in the state for safety programs. FFA members taught young children all the aspects of fire safety including how to properly use fire extinguishers to put out fuel/oil fires. A tractor safety program was also put on for Marticville Middle students as well.

The first place chapter was the Berlin Brothersvalley FFA and third place went to the Spud Growers chapter. These top three Pennsylvania winners competed at the National Safety Council held during the National FFA Convention in Kansas City, Missouri.

Manor FFA has been involved in the Pennsylvania Adopt-A-Highway program for several years.

Approximately four times each year FFA members contact Manor Township for the road cleanup signs, orange vests, and trash bags. Then they collect the trash along Bender and Bender Mill roads.

Cooking In Parchment Or En Papillote Is Fun

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — You don't need to eat in a gourmet restaurant to enjoy flounder en papillote.

"Cooking in parchment, or en papillote, is quite simple," said Fay Strickler, Berks County home extension economist. "Just seal food in parchment packages, place in the oven, and soon you'll have a great meal."

As each individual serving cooks, steam fills and inflates the packages. The flavors mingle and the natural juices are held in.

If you prefer, you can aluminum foil in the same way as parchment, but the visual effect is not the same. At one time, brown paper bags were used to cook meals in, but today, the composition of materials used in brown bags is uncertain and the brown bags are not recommended. Parchment, on the other hand, is designed for cooking and can be purchased at kitchen supply stores and larger supermarkets.

"Some cookbooks tell you to precook food, then reheat it about five minutes en papillote. But for most preparations this is an unnecessary step," Fay said.

She prepared the following seafood recipes entirely in parchment.

• Cut a piece of parchment 12x18-inches or twice as wide as the fillet to be cooked. Fold in half (12x9-inches). Starting at the fold, draw half a heart shape and cut it. Unfold.

• Use cooking spray to lightly oil all but a 2-inch border of the parchment. Center food on one side of the heart, near the fold. Leave a 2-inch border at the edge.

• Fold the paper over the food so the cut edges meet. Starting at one end, fold a small section of parchment together, then fold again. Hold this section down and fold the next section. Continue until edges are completely sealed.

• Place the papillote on a baking sheet and place in a preheated oven. Cook for the designated time.

• The pouch will puff up with steam and brown during cooking.

FILLETS WITH HERB BUTTER IN PARCHMENT

Vegetable oil
½ cup butter, softened
½ cup finely chopped green onions, including tops
2 tablespoons finely minced fresh parsley
1 tablespoon finely minced fresh chervil

Prepare six pieces parchment. Lightly oil each. In small bowl, combine butter, green onion, parsley, tarragon, and chervil. Place a fillet on each piece of parchment and spread evenly with herbed butter. Close parchment and place on baking sheet. Bake at 400 degrees until done, about 15 to 20 minutes. Place on individual plates. Serves 6.

FLOUNDER WITH FINE HERBS IN PARCHMENT

4 medium flounder or other fillets
Vegetable oil
4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
2 tablespoons finely chopped mushrooms
1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh parsley
1 teaspoon finely chopped green onion tops
1 teaspoon finely chopped celery leaves
1 teaspoon finely chopped fresh tarragon
1 teaspoon pressed garlic
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup dry white wine

In small saucepan, melt butter over medium heat. Lightly saute onion and mushrooms. Add parsley, green onion, celery, tarragon, garlic, salt, and pepper. Stir in wine and mix thoroughly.

Place fillets on parchment. Spread vegetable mixture evenly over fillets. Close parchment. Bake at 400 degrees until done, about 15 minutes. Place on individual plates. Serves 4.

HERBED SHRIMP IN PARCHMENT

2 pounds medium or large shrimp, peeled and deveined
Vegetable oil
2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
1 tablespoon olive oil
¾ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dill weed
¼ teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon cumin
½ teaspoon basil
1½ teaspoons pressed garlic
2 teaspoons minced green onion tops

Prepare eight pieces parchment. Lightly oil each.

Prepare and devein shrimp. Combine juice, oil, pepper, salt, dill, sugar, cumin, basil, garlic and green onion in a wide, shallow dish. Lay shrimp flat in mixture, then turn.

Divide shrimp evenly among parchment. Close parchment. Bake at 400 degrees until puffy and lightly browned, about 12 to 15 minutes. Place on individual plates. Serves 8.

PARMESAN SNAPPER IN PARCHMENT

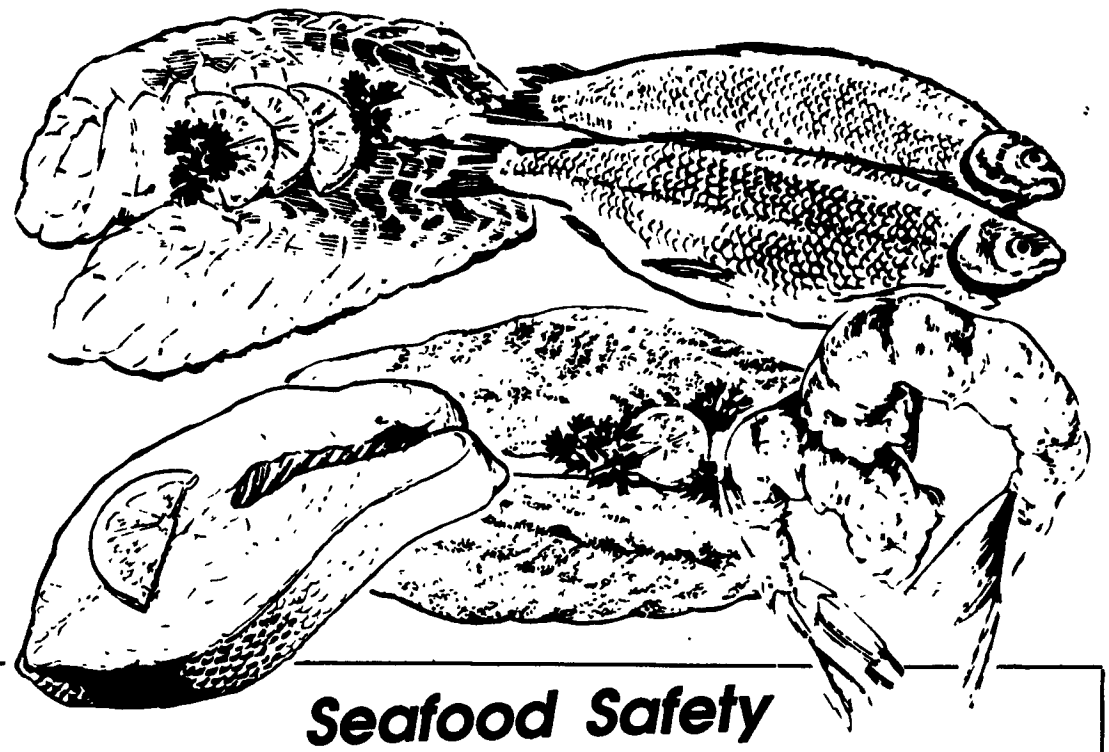
2 pounds snapper fillets
½ cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pressed garlic
Vegetable oil for parchment
1 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
1 cup toasted bread crumbs

In long glass baking dish, combine oil, slat, and garlic. Cut fish into six portions. Place in mixture and marinate 10 minutes. Turn and marinate 10 minutes longer.

While fish is marinating, prepare six pieces of parchment. Lightly oil each. Place on baking sheet.

Remove fish from marinade. Roll in cheese, then in crumbs. Place each on a piece of parchment. Close parchment. Bake at 400 degrees until puffy and lightly browned, about 15 to 20 minutes. Place on individual plates. Serves 6.

Participants at the Berks County Extension examine the fish fillets baked in parchment paper, which Fay Strickler prepared.



Seafood Safety

Buying

• Purchase seafood last and get it home as soon as possible so that it will not be out of refrigeration any longer than necessary. Never leave seafood in a hot car.

• Seafood should feel cold, not cool, to the touch.

• Buy seafood that smells and looks fresh. Products that have a strong, objectionable smell should be rejected. For whole fish, the eyes should be clear and not sunken; the gills, red and free of slime; the scales, firmly attached; and the skin, shiny and not faded. For dressed or filleted products, avoid those that show signs of discoloration.

• Purchase seafood, especially clams, oysters and mussels, from reputable dealers who are certified.

• Clams, oysters and mussels should be live with shells that are tightly closed or that close when handled. Whole crabs should be purchased live too.

Storing

• Store live oysters in a dry, cool place; refrigerate live clams and mussels.

• If fresh fish will be used within two days, store seafood in refrigerator. Place the fish in a bed of crushed ice or on the bottom shelf of your refrigerator.

• If held longer than a day or two, freeze fish and use within three to six months.

Thawing

• Thaw seafood overnight in the refrigerator. A one-pound package will defrost overnight.

• For quicker thawing, place seafood under cold running water. Whole shellfish, such as shrimp or clams, can be placed in a colander with cold water running over them. Place dressed seafood, such as fillets or shucked shellfish, in a tightly closed plastic bag, then immerse them in a deep pan of cold water.

• Never thaw seafood at room temperature or with hot or warm water.

• When using your microwave to thaw fish, defrost at about 30 percent power. Follow the manufacturer's instructions to determine defrosting time (a pound of fillets defrost in about five to six minutes).

• Fish defrosted in the microwave should be cooked immediately after thawing.

Preparation

• Before handling seafood, wash your hands for at least 20 seconds with hot soapy water. Also wash your hands after going to the bathroom, before working with new food or new utensils, after finishing food preparation and before serving foods.

• Prevent cross-contamination. Never let raw seafood come in contact with cooked seafood or any other food, raw or cooked.

• If you use a cloth for cleaning in the kitchen, use a clean one after working with raw seafood. You may find it easier to use paper towels and dispose of them after each cleaning.

• Cut raw seafood on an acrylic cutting board, never a wooden one. Clean the board thoroughly after each use.

• Wash boards, counters and all utensils with detergent and hot water after each use.

• Do not use the same plate that held raw seafood to serve cooked fish and shellfish.

• Scrub live oysters, clams and mussels with a stiff brush before shucking or cooking.

Cooking

• To help remove bacteria, first wash seafood in cold running water.

• Cook raw seafood thoroughly with a continuous heat source.

• Keep hot foods hot and cold foods cold.

• Avoid interrupted cooking, which can encourage bacterial growth.

• Never leave cooked seafood out of refrigeration for more than 30 minutes.

Mitchell, Duncannon, writes that he cleans it by placing the skillet in an self-cleaning electric oven for two hours. After the oven doors open, while skillet is still hot, remove skillet from oven and wire brush or rub with steel wool. Immediately wash and dry. Farm Women Societies

Lancaster Society 14

On. Oct. 10, the Lancaster Society of Farm Women #14 met at the home of Mildred Herr. A treat was served by hostesses Viola Hostetter and Eileen McComas. The ladies responded to a service project with more than 50 items to be donated to Christ Home for Children.

Members were honored to have as guest speaker Miriam Herr. In her unique manor of mingling a flow of poetry and profound thoughts her subject "What Difference Does It Make" challenged us. The world is full of people in need of a word of compassion, kindness, encouragement, love, peace, and above all hope to be found in Jesus Christ. Be alert to opportunities to share that word, Miriam said.

Since a number of our members are now residing at Landis Homes the Society met there on Nov. 13. Serving refreshments were hostesses Edna Groff, Arlene Esbenshade, and Ruth Combs. Kathryn Hershey, who for years served with Child Evangelism Ministries, was the guest. She thrilled us with a report on the book "One Came In Power," by Joan Shetler.

On Dec. 10, our spouses joined us for a great time of fellowship, food and song. The home of the Bard's Catering Service is where members gathered for an abundance of food. A capable choir director, Kay Weaver, provided spirited entertainment of song. Her mother Orpha Weaver presented as essay that drew members' thoughts to the worship of the Christ Child. All in all the evening was a great way to approach the blessed Christmas season.

Wishing you the very best for 1997! So many times we concentrate on selling really fine old trains that we forget to tell you about all the trains that are not very fine at first glance and do not bring high prices. We pride ourselves on selling "entry level" trains to people who don't want to hock their house and lot to buy a few old trains. We gain considerable satisfaction from selling low priced trains to people who are toy train operators rather than collectors. Also, in this particular sale, you will find a ton of stufff that needs your help, either to look better or to run again. Plenty of pre 1940 Lionel "O" and standard in this group, plus all kinds of 1946-1970 locos and accessories.

FORAGES

ARE THE SECOND MOST IMPORTANT INGREDIENT OF ANY DAIRY RATION (BEHIND WATER)

Excellent forages are the beginning for any successful ration and now is the time to start preparing for next year's forage crops.

Many of the decisions you make now can have a great impact on the quality of the forages you harvest next year and the level of herd performance you experience as a result of your forages.

SOME INDUSTRY ACCEPTED GUIDELINES

- When selecting a silage corn variety use plant energy density as the first criteria followed by total plant yield and digestibility.
- Harvest forages on the basis of plant maturity first and then store in the form best suited to existing weather conditions.
- Chop corn silage short (3/8" to 1/2") and haylage longer (3/8" with 15-20% greater than 1 1/2")
- Forages harvested with greater than 70% moisture run a significant risk of Clostridia Fermentation.

PROPERLY HARVESTED AND STORED FORAGES ARE KEY TO TOTAL HERD PERFORMANCE

These Research Proven Products are Designed to Help You in the Successful Harvesting and Storage of your Important Forages, and Are Now Available with Special Pricing Incentives During MASTER MIX FEEDS 1997 Forage Treatment Booking Program.

Outdated Infant/Geriatric Formula Can Be Fed To Calves, Swine

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Like milk, baby formula has an expiration date beyond which it is unfit for human consumption. Manufacturers, who must discard millions of pounds of outdated formula annually, have been searching for better options.

Research in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences shows that one promising alternative to putting formula in landfills is to use it for animal feed, an option that would save livestock producers money and cut manufacturer's disposal costs.

"Formula has great potential as animal feed because it's made of nutritious ingredients that maintain their quality well beyond the expiration date for human consumption," said Randy Swope, graduate student in animal science.

Swope and Harold Harpster, associate professor of animal science, have been looking at various food processing by-products for cattle feed. "Feeding food industry by-products to animals typically results in a win-win situation," Swope said. "The manufacturer cuts disposal costs, and the producer gets a source of nutrients that costs less than conventional feeds."

After comparing the nutrient content of infant and geriatric formulas with the nutritional needs of different animals, Swope and Harpster determined that geriatric formula might be good for swine, while infant formula would work for calves.

"Just as with human infants, a young calf's diet must be carefully selected to avoid upsetting its digestive system," Swope said. "Geriatric formula contains corn oil, which would give calves diarrhea, but the ingredients in the baby formula seem ideally suited to a calf's digestive system."

The researchers randomly assigned 30 calves at Penn State's Dairy Breeding Research Center to one of three liquid diets. Ten calves received a control diet of commercial milk replacer, while the other two groups received infant formula supplemented with either soy or whey protein concentrate. For six weeks, calves were fed the experimental diets. Then all of the calves were weaned and fed the same dry diet for four weeks to see if the experimental diets had any lingering effects.

The results show that outdated infant formula, when supplemented with a high-quality protein source such as whey, can be used safely in calf-rearing systems with substantial savings in feed costs.

"The calves fed infant formula supplemented with whey protein performed just as well as the calves fed the commercial milk replacer," Swope said. "Those fed infant formual supplemented with soy protein had inferior growth during the first six weeks of the experiment, but they improved in the last four weeks."

The milk replacer cost $2.21 per kilogram of live weight gain during the first period, compared to only $.55 for formula supplemented with soy and $1.04 for formula suppemented with whey protein. "For the best combination of performance and savings on feed costs, formula with whey protein was the best option," Harpster said.

Swope and Harpster also collaborated with Ken Kephart, associate professor of animal science at Penn State, to study the effect of geriatric formula on swine performance. They fed 152 pigs either a conventional corn and soybean-meal diet or one that included three-quarters of a gallon of geriatric formula as well as supplemental dry feed.

"At first, pigs on the experimental diet spent six to eight hours consuming each of their twice-daily allotments of geriatric formula," Swope said. "But as they adapted to the new feed source, they ate the formula more quickly. In human terms, the pigs had to develop a taste for the formula. That's important because a farmer trying the product might be disappointed with low intakes for the first few days. It may take a little more time."

Pigs fed the geriatric formula grew faster during the first half of the experiment and weighed more at 84 days. "Growth rates evened out over the experiment, so slaughter weights were similar for both groups," Swope said. "However, pigs fed the geriatric formula consumed 65 percent less dry feed than those in the control group. Pigs fed the geriatric formula had a 16 percent improvement in overall feed efficiency."

At slaughter, pigs fed the geriatric formula had less fat, more muscle, and a higher percentage of lean cuts, so they were worth about $3.50 more per pig on a commercial grading program.

The research has given producers a new source of inexpensive feed. "The cost savings from using waste formula already are very good, and they will look even better if grain and feed costs rise," said Harpster. "The formula manufacturer already is shipping tractor trailer loads of the geriatric formula to some of the largest hog farmers in the country."

MINIMUM PAYMENTS ARE COSTLY

Robert J. Thee, Ph.D.

Resource Management

You've made it through the holiday season and all the activities, events, and expenses that are a part of it. But now that the bills are coming in, you find that more was charged on your credit cards than you realized. What can you do?

One possibility is to make just the minimum payment required on your credit card. But before you do, think about how much that may really cost you in the long run. A $2,500 balance at 18.5 percent APR (annual percentage rate) can take you as long as 30 years to pay off when you make only the minimum payment figured at just 2 percent of the outstanding balance. Do you really want to be paying for those gifts 30 years from now?

The minimum payment required by the credit card issuer is usually figured on 2 to 4 percent of the outstanding balance for each period. That outstanding balance includes accumulated interest charges. You can find out what percentage your card issuer uses by looking at the statement of terms and conditions that is mailed to you once each year. A minimum payment figured at the 4 percent figure will pay off the balance more quickly than one figured at only 2 percent. When possible, add an extra amount each month in order to pay off the balance sooner.

In order to avoid charging more than they can afford to pay at the end of the month, some people subtract an amount equal to the purchase from their checking account as they make each charge. That way, when the statement arrives, they can pay off the entire bill and avoid incurring interest charges. It may, however, make balancing the checkbook more confusing, so be careful if using this method. Just be sure not to subtract the total amount charged a second time when you write the check.

If you must carry a balance on your credit card, there are some strategies that may still help you reduce the interest you pay. Consider getting a second card with no annual fee to use for the smaller purchases that you can pay off each month. Use the lowest interest rate card for carrying the balance from large purchases. So long as you are able to pay off the second card each month, you will not be charged interest so the interest rate is not important.

For some people, however, a second card can be dangerous. If having additional credit available makes it too easy to charge more or if you dont have the discipline to keep your credit under control, this option should not be used.

In addition, the more credit that is easily accessible to you, the more difficult it may be to obtain credit you really need for a car or other major purchase. A lender may be reluctant to extend additional credit when you could go on a spending spree with your collection of credit cards and incur extra debt that would jeapordize your ability to pay off the loan under consideration.

How the interest is calculated also makes a difference on how much interest you pay. The two primary methods of calculating interest on a credit card are the average daily balance including new purchases and the average daily balance over a two month period including new purchases. The difference can be important if you occasionally pay off the the entire balance. The least favorable method is the average daily balance over a two month cycle which results in higher interest costs.

You can also save monev on your mortgage by paying an extra amount each month if there is no prepayment penalty. In Pennsylvania, you cannot be charged a prepayment penalty on a home mortgage. For other types of mortgages, you should consult with your lender before prepaying.

If you make an extra payment on your mortgage, you can significantly reduce the total interest you pay on the loan. For example, on a $100,000 30-year loan at 8 percent interest, the payment is $734. By adding an extra $100 each month, the total interest paid is reduced from more than $164,000 to less than $102,000. Furthermore, the loan would be paid off in 20 years and 2 months. But even if you don't make an extra payment each month or if it is less than $100, you can still achieve substantial savings over time.

The amount you choose to prepay may vary each month may be a fixed amount or may be equal to the principal on the next payment.

Prepayment on a mortgage, however, may not always be the best choice. Consider what rate of return you can get on investment alternatives compared to your after-tax mortgage interest rate.

Novartis Is Created

GREENSBORO, N.C. — The United States Federal Trade Commission (FTC) cleared — with certain conditions — the creation of Novartis through the merger of Ciba and Sandoz.

In the U.S. agribusiness area, certain steps must precede the integration of Ciba Crop Protection and some assets and business operations of Sandoz Agro, Inc., to form Novartis Crop Protection, Inc.

First, Sandoz must complete the sale (announced in September) of part of its corn herbicide business to BASF AG. No Ciba Protection products or facilities are being sold.

Novartis Crop Protection, Inc., will be formed by Jan. 1, and will include all Ciba Crop Protection products and operations. However, until the Sandoz corn herbicides have been sold to BASF, no remaining Sandoz products or business operations will be incorporated into the new company. At this time, it is unknown when the BASF transaction will be completed.

Manifold Valve System Simplifies Sprayer Plumbing

WHEATON, Ill. — A new valve manifold system developed by Spraying Systems Company, makers of TeeJet® spray products, offers spray applicators a fast and easy way to install electric boom control valves.

By packaging up to five TeeJet 344 ball valves into a single, convenient assembly, the TeeJet 440 series Directo Valve® manifold greatly reduces both setup time and the risk for leaks.

"Now applicators can have the reliable performance of a ball valve with the convenience previously found only with solenoid valves," said Scott Lauher, TeeJet technical service specialist. "With the 440, the sprayer plumbing is greatly simplified. There's less need to fabricate pipe or hoses to connect your valves, so there's less opportunity for leaks."

Case Expands Tillage Lineup

RACINE, Wis. — New versions of the popular Case IH 4300 field cultivator and 5800 chisel plow will add versatility and productivity to farming operations.

The new equipment introduced by Case Corporation includes a low-profile version of the 4300, floating-hitch models of the 4300 and 5800, and a mounted version of the 5800 mulch-till chisel.

"This expanded lineup gives growers more power over their choices to match equipment to their tillage needs for optimum convenience and performance," said Dave Duff, Case Corporation product manager. "Customer input helped us identify areas where conservation tillage equipment could help make a positive difference in their farming operations. These new models satisfy those needs."

The Case IH 4300 field cultivator — available in sizes ranging from 37 feet 4 inches to 47 feet 4 inches — is more versatile, with the availability of a new low-profile version.

The new 4300 low-profile field cultivator, for instance, will be especially practical for farmers whose fields, are near urban areas. "Some of these areas have height restrictions due to obstacles, such as low bridges, that make traveling from field to field very tricky, even impossible, without taking a longer or out-of-the-way route," he said.

With a transport height of 13 feet 2 inches, the low-profile version lets farmers travel most roads without worry.

"It also gets the equipment where it's needed most — the field," said Duff. "Even in high-residue conditions, the 4300 prepares a seedbed that enhances seed-to-soil contact in just one pass."

He explained that by utilizing exclusive Case IH Vibra Shank® tooling, the 4300 brings clods and residue to the surface where they are broken down, while the fine, loose soil is shifted down around the seedbed.

The new model is available in sizes ranging from 37 feet 4 inches to 47 feet 4 inches.

Deere Enters Large Square Baler Market

MOLINE, Ill. — The new John Deere 100 Large Square Baler is ideal for custom hay producers as well as larger farm and haying operations.

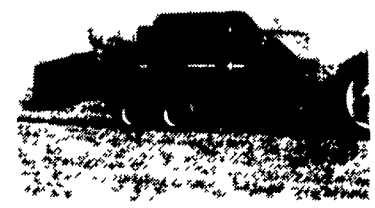
The baler is designed to produce a bale up to eight feet long, 31.5 inches square, and weighing up to 1,000 pounds. The large, square bales are favored in operations facing storage and stacking concerns, as well as on-road transportation to customers.

John Deere's first offering into the large, square baler segment, the model 100 features a robust design with many heavy-duty components — all targeted to meet high-productivity and durability demands.

The John Deere 100 Baler has several components and features unique to this size and configuration of baler. For example, an industry exclusive, self-cleaning "Powr-Feed" feeding system, a heavy-duty tandem axle option; and an integrated crop precutter. Major components, such as the knotters, feeding forks, and plungerhead, are all powershaft and gearbox driven. The main drive, flywheel, pickup, and feeding forks are protected by clutches rather than shear bolts, for added operator convenience.

The John Deere exclusive Powr-Feed feeding system is a self-cleaning design that utilizes a spring-loaded ratchet clutch assembly on the feed rake drum.

The model 100 features a precutter knife system that can be activated to precut the crop material before it enters the bale chamber. The three-knife precutter assembly is mounted in the bottom of the crop conveyor channel, and is engaged or disengaged with a single lever. As the feed rakes pull the crop into the conveyor channel and across the three extended knives, each bale flake is cut into four sections. The sections are intertwined as the rakes move the crop to the bale chamber, resulting in solid and easy-to-handle bales.



The John Deere 100 Large Square Baler is designed to produce a bale up to 8 feet long, 31.5 inches square, and weighing up to 1,000 pounds. An exclusive, self-cleaning Powr-Feed system, an optional tandem axle, and a crop precutter are among the baler's key features.

Transmission Increases Tractor Productivity

ATLANTA, Ga. — Massey Ferguson® 300 Series cab and footstep (non-cab) tractors, in 60, 70, 80 and 95 PTO horsepower models, are available with an 18 Speedshift transmission that excels in row crop and fieldwork.

The 18 Speedshift transmission provides a total of 18 forward and six reverse speeds, with eight speed ratios in the 3.5 to 8.5 working range plus excellent gear overlap.

"On-the-go speed changes are made without clutching, and all shifts are fully synchronized for maximum comfort, convenience and performance," said John Sargeant, Massey Ferguson product marketing manager. "This increases productivity for jobs such as primary and secondary tillage, cultivating, planting, chemical application, harvesting, mowing, and baling."

A synchronized reverse gear is located opposite the first forward gear to provide for easy straight line shuttle shifts. This improves forward-reverse cycle times for applications such as loader work, moving round bales, tight headland maneuvering, and utility work.

All gear and range changes are controlled with a single compound lever, located to the operator's right, to eliminate searching and reaching for two or three separate levers. There's an 18 percent reduction between speeds when downshifting and a 20 percent increase when upshifting. This results in smooth, easy speed changes and allows the operator to compensate for tough pulling or rough terrain situations without clutching and without interrupting the power flow to the wheels.

Milker's School Set

FREDERICK, Md. — A Milker's School has been scheduled for Frederick County on Jan. 14.

This school is designed to provide milkers with the latest information on milking techniques and associated practices. Topics included are anatomy of the udder, milk letdown, somatic cells and the CMT, costs of mastitis, milking equipment performance, causes of mastitis, teat dipping, cleaning milking equipment, treatment and prevention of mastitis, milking techniques, residue avoidance, and much more.

Although the program is targeted to the folks that are milking the cows, herdsmen and herd owners are encouraged to attend with the milkers to allow cooperative learning.

The school runs from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and will be held at the Mountain Gate Restaurant in Thurmont.

The registration fee is $20 per person and will include lunch and reference materials. Checks should be made payable to Frederick County EAC and mailed to Ag Office, University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, Frederick County Office, 330 Montevue Lane, Frederick, MD 21702-8200.

New Soybeans Halve Saturated Fat, Keep Nutrition

RALEIGH, N.C. — Two new soybean breeding lines with less than half the saturated fat of regular soybeans are ready to lend their genes to commercial varieties - good news for health - conscious consumers concerned about soybean oil's typical 16 percent saturated fat, a U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist said.

"These new varieties, N94-2575 and C1945, each have a total saturated fat content of about seven percent," said geneticist Joseph W. Burton of USDA's Agricultural Research Service. "Since soybean oil is now in more than 75 percent of the vegetable oils and fats on the market, this could help lots of consumers reduce the saturated fat in their diet."

The Food and Drug Administration allows a product to be labeled "low in saturated fat" if it contains one gram of saturated fat or less per serving. To meet that standard, soybeans would have to be seven percent saturated fat or less.

Burton worked with James R. Wilcox at the ARS Crop Production and Pest Control Research Unit in West Lafayette, Ind., to breed soybean plants specifically to reduce the beans' levels of a saturated fat called palmitic acid. Research has shown palmitic acid and other saturated fats can raise LDL cholesterol levels in the blood, contributing to heart disease. National dietary guidelines recommend limiting daily consumption of saturated fats to no more than 8 to 10 percent of total calories.

In these new varieties, the palmitic acid is replaced with oleic acid, which has some health benefits. In addition, omega-3 and omega-6 fatty acids, which can actually lower cholesterol levels, are at 7 and 60 percent respectively - essentially the same as regular soybeans.

The U.S. produces 15 billion pounds of soybean oil annually, with a market value of about $4 billion. Soybeans are high in protein and other nutrients. They also have isoflavones, which studies suggest have cancer-preventing properties.

"There's a lot of good nutrition in soybeans. Their unsaturated fatty acids are needed to help our cells stay healthy. But one thing we, and our cells, don't need is more saturated fat," said biochemist Norberta W. Schoene with the ARS Human Nutrition Research Center in Beltsville, Md.

Plant breeders can obtain packets of 100 seeds of N94-2575 from Burton in Raleigh, N.C. Seeds of C1943 are available from Wilcox at the West Lafayette, Ind. laboratory. Burton said he will breed a commercial line of low-fat soybeans which should be ready for growers in about three years.

"N94-2575 is late-maturing and suited for southeastern breeders, while C1943 matures a little earlier to meet the needs of Midwestern breeders," said Wilcox. "Both have excellent seed quality. Their yields are a little lower than some commercial varieties, but they could work well for breeders who want to develop a higher-yielding, low-fat soybean lines."

THINK CONCRETE WHEN PLANNING YOUR FEED STORAGE!!

"This is the kind of silo you need to protect your valuable feed."

"HOW WILL YOU BE STORING YOUR VALUABLE FORAGES AND GRAINS IN THE 21st CENTURY?"

It's not too early to begin planning your storage and feeding systems for the year 2000 and beyond.

As margins narrow, dairymen need to invest in efficiency; this can have as great an influence on PROFIT as milk price changes.

"IF YOU NEED A SILO...
YOU NEED TO CALL BOB FRANCIS...
There will be a modest price increase effective January 1, And besides our schedule is already filling in. Don't wait too late and be disappointed.

IN ALUMINUM BODIES
EBY BUILDS IT

M.H. Eby custom-builds aluminum truck bodies for the agri-transportation market. Nobody offers more sizes and options in:

- FLATBED BODIES - Lengths to 32', choice of 5 widths.
- GRAIN BODIES - Lengths to 24', landscape and general purpose dumps to 12'.
- LANDSCAPE BODIES - Lengths to 12', We'll build to your specs!

Let EBY custom build one for you.

For greater payload capacity, Eby's aluminum design is equal in strength to steel and up to 40% lighter. Our corrosion-resistant components never need painting. That means minimum maintenance, improved appearance and higher resale value.

Eby products have superior standard features. And we offer customer options for virtually any application. Agriculture is your business - building bodies to haul it is ours.

LCI To Form Livestock Ethics Council, Subsidiary

DALLAS, Texas - The National Youth Livestock Program Ethics Symposium convened Dec. 6-8 to discuss and take action on providing a safe, wholesome product while at the same time addressing issues related to the ethical treatment of show livestock.

Livetock programs have come under fire in the last few years because of some isolated incidences of unethical, and sometimes illegal, activities involved in youth livestock program competition. An industry-wide endeavor has emerged to address the issue.

The National Livestock Ethics Council will begin operation in January as a non-profit subsidiary of LCI, a consensus-building arm of the food animal agriculture industry. The council will intially work to eliminate the incidences of unethical and illegal activities related to youth livestock events.

The announcement was made today during the opening general session of the National Youth Livestock Program Ethics Symposium being held in Dallas-Fort Worth, Texas.

In making the announcement, LCI Chairman of the Board Dr. Dreyfus L. Froe, of Pfizer Animal Health, said tremendous progress has been made in addressing this issue during the last two years, "but, as we know, more progress is needed if we are to be effective in our efforts of preserving the integrity of both our youth programs and our industry at-large."

In fulfilling its mission, the council will serve as a central clearing house for flow of youth ethics information and available resources and will sponsor and facilitate regional and/or national workshops addressing youth livestock ethics.

In addition, the council will publish and disseminate a quarterly newsletter, and a National Livestock Ethics Council website will be developed and maintained.

LCI began addressing youth livestock ethics two years ago with the support and involvement from a group of industry organizations. Those groups include the American Farm Bureau Federation, American Veterinary Medical Association, Animal Industry Foundation, National FFA Organization and National 4-H. These organizations will continue to provide direction for the Council.

According to Dr. Jeff Goodwin, extension and 4-H youth specialist with the University of Idaho Cooperative Extension, a number of food safety, animal well-being, and ethics issues have surfaced from the occurrence of these isolated incidences. Goodwin said that four major categories of improper show practices have surfaced for discussion:

- Improper use of animal health products on show stock, including tranquilizers not labeled for food animals, diuretics to make an animal lose weight rapidly, anti-inflammatory agents to make a crippled animal walk, and performance-enhancing drugs to build up muscle mass.
- False ownership and substition of animals.
- The hiring of professional fitters and groomers.
- The physical alteration of animals.

"Our 4-H and FFA youth programs are very unique and precious commodities in our industry. We must do everything we can to uphold the integrity of these programs and preserve their existence," said Glenn N. Slack, LCI executive director. Slack will also serve as CEO of the council.

"Animal agriculture is under the microscope. We cannot be seen allowing unethical, deceptive or illegal practices to occur in our industry, especially in our youth programs."

Froe told the audience of about 200 industry leaders, stock show officials, and youth program educators gathered at the symposium that "together, we can have an influence upon the coming generations of livestock industry leaders and educators, an influence that promotes progress and competition among youth while maintaining ethical standards."

Purina Mills Announces Higher-Energy Milking Ration

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Purina Mills, Inc., has introduced Proteus, a nutritonal discovery that more efficiently converts feed protein into milk protein.

When high-energy Proteus is fed with corn silage, legume forage, and corn-based feeding programs, cows need fewer pounds of protein to maintain high production levels. Or, when used to raise the energy level in a herd's ration, Proteus can signficantly boost production without a big increase in feed cost.

Proteus is based in part on a new, patented processed protein called "Hi-VAP," which stands for High Biological Value Absorbed Protein. Proteus and Hi-VAP are quite different from the traditional UIP (undegradable intake proteins) or "bypass protein" sources and use concepts.

"Undegradable intake proteins are supposed to 'bypass' digestions in the rumen and put more available protein into the cow's intestines," said Dr. David Weakley, Purina's manager of dairy research. "However, the levels of UIP (undegradable intake proteins) in many common feed ingredients are usually very inconsistent. This, along with questionable small intestinal digestibility, means you risk production losses if you try to rely on average values when looking to reduce protein feeding."

Proteus is specially formulated to deliver very consistent, high amounts of high-quality digestible protein to the cow's small intestine, which ensures that more of the available feed protein really will convert to milk protein.

"Many producers assume that raising their income potential means making more milk or getting higher prices for it, but another way is to increase your economic efficiency," said Weakley. "Obviously, when it takes less money to make the same amount of milk — or when you can make your milk for the same money — you're going to come out ahead financially."

Another benefit of the efficiency of Proteus is that less protein will be excreted as nitrogen in a cow's urine, which lessens the risk of nitrate environmental contamination.

Growers Need To Be Proactive Concerning Land Use Issues

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Two-acre mini farms and suburbs sprawl have brought city dwellers to the countryside. In the process, land values have skyrocketed, population densities have increased, and farmers now have neighbors who understand little about the business of agriculture.

To reduce tensions with their new neighbors, and in the process prevent lawsuits, farmers need to be proactive, said a legal educator at Ohio State University.

"Land use is a big issue for farmers and growers, especially since Ohio is no longer an agrarian-based society," said Leisa Boley, an attorney who works with Ohio State University Extension to educate producers about legal issues.

Because of the way laws are structured, any time a case goes to court and a decision is made, that decision is difficult to overturn. So, a grower's or farmer's best defense is to take preventive measures, Boley said.

"The first thing I recommend to farmers is to understand where their property is located," said Boley, who also has a private practice. The law views land as a bundle of rights, and knowing the laws and limitations of the land is essential to land use. Farmers should know if their property is inside the city limits, inside the township limits and how it's zoned. Keep that information on the farm.

She also offers these additional points of advice:

- Build a positive image within the community.

Farmers must educate their neighbors and build public relations for themselves. It doesn't have to be on a grand scale — host a field day for a school, take a few animals into a classroom or sponsor a Little League team. Sponsoring these things gives farmers a chance to tell their side of the story.

"Some people say that's just wishy-washy, touchy-feely stuff that isn't going to solve anything, but knowing each other's roles lowers tension on both sides," she said. "Farmers need to be outspoken and active in their community."

- Make the farm aesthetically appealing.

Keep a fresh coat of paint on buildings, remove trash and conceal things people don't understand. For example, don't put a dead hog composting set-up next to the road, or if your are building a big confinement operation, put up a row of trees.

Farmers often think because they own the land, they can use that land in any way they see fit. But if a farm looks bad or smells band or in some way affects someone else's living environment, the other person has a right to sue.

Odor will continue to be a problem for neighbor relations until new technology offers a solution, Boley said. That's why education and public relations are so critical.

- Get active in local politics. Give financial support to parties, run for township trustees, run for county commissioner. "My client would have a much better chance in court if the judge knows who the person is," Boley said. "It might not be right, but it's a fact of life."

- Use common sense. For example, if you know someone is having a neighborhood picnic, don't clean out the lagoon that day. When giving tours, give an extra cleaning to the high-traffic areas.

Boley will be discussing these and other land issues at the 1997 joint meeting of the Ohio Fruit and Vegetable Growers Congress and the Ohio Roadside Marketing Conference. The conference runs Feb. 5-8 at the Toledo Seagate Center. For registration information, contact Mike Pullins at (614) 249-2424.

Changes Made To WPS For Insecticide

WILMINGTON, Del. — Zeneca Ag Products has announced changes to the Worker Protection Standards (WPS) for Force 3G and Force 1.5G insecticides.

Labels for both products no longer require entry intervals after application. In addition, posting of treated areas is no longer required.

Karen Westcott, Northeast market lead for Zeneca soil insecticides, said the revised product labels more correctly reflect the technical profile of Force. The label changes also make using Force more convenient for growers.

"Risk to growers is minimal for these products, which is why restricted entry intervals have been eliminated and posting of treating areas is no longer required. However, we urge growers to follow all label directions when handling farm chemicals," she said.

In Stock
Hurry In...

The compact size of the L35 with TL720& BT900 allows you to operate efficiently in tight, small areas that are inaccessible to larger TLBs. And, it's easy to move from one job to another. It can be transported with just a 3/4 ton pickup truck and trailer, usually with a regular Class C Driver's License. Operators find the controls "user -friendly," especially useful in rental fleets, and large contractor fleets where operators may go from one piece of equipment to another on a regular basis. The L35 retains the full versatility of a compact with its 3-pt. hitch and PTO for tilling, mowing or box scraper work.

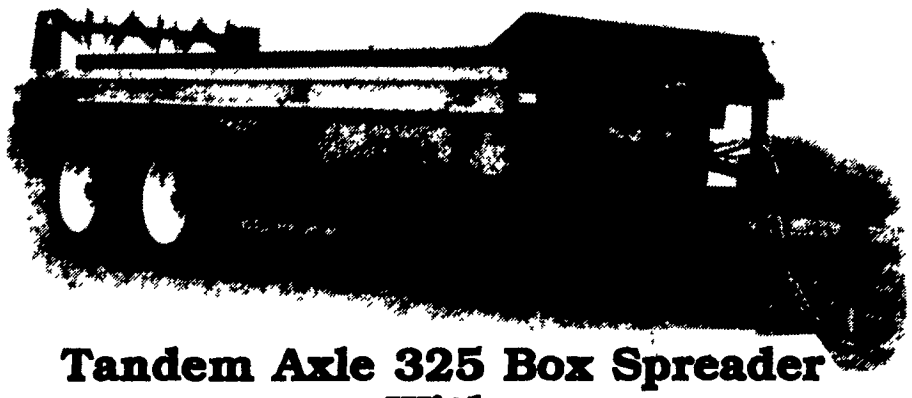
Binkley & Hurst Is Ready To Deliver A Quality Spreader To You



Tandem Axle 325 Box Spreader With Poly Floor For Better Slide & Less Freeze Fast

Also 425 Bushel Hydraulic Drive In Stock

Low profile design means easy loading by skid loader, front end loader or barn cleaner.

Durable Galvanized steel sides and corrosive resistant for long life. One-piece seamless construction won't catch material or leak.

Heavy-duty gear boxes; one a 90 degree beater drive, the other a two-speed worm box with bronze gear and steel worm, provide efficient power transmission, smoother operation and long life. They're protected by a polyethylene shield that won't rust or dent.

Hydraulic apron drive option provides infinite unloading speeds to match any load, ground speed or application rate requirements. It's available on the four largest models. Conveyor slats are made from 1/4" high-strength rail-steel.

Full length, sturdy A-frame hitch (7-guage steel on MS135/175/250 and 3/16" steel on MS 325/425) ties directly to the axle for extra strength and durability. Because the load is carried and not pulled, the weight of the load and its associated stress is more evenly distributed across a broader base.

Hammer Discharge

Patented Free Swinging Hammer Expeller

Forged Steel Hammer

Each hammer has a nylon bushing and a replaceable manganese steel wear plate

The expeller on all ProTwin models features 15 forged steel hammers mounted on a 2 1/2" shaft The hammers pivot on 1/8" bolts with nylon anti seize type bushings that allow free movement The expeller rotates at over 800 RPM allowing each eight pound hammer to swing down into the material, peeling it off and slinging it underhand in a fine spread pattern with no clumps The 3" wide free swinging hammers absorb shock and tolerate most foreign objects Each hammer is faced with a work-hardening manganese steel wear plate for longer life and low cost replacement The adjustable shroud allows easy hammer clearance setting for optimum spread pattern width This proven hammer expeller design enables fine spreading control and material calibration through the combination of the hydraulic door opening and ground speed

Rear Drive Compartment*

The right auger is driven at the rear and is shear pin protected Bearings, chains and sprockets are easily accessible for routine maintenance

*Shields removed for illustration only
Do not operate without shields in place and functioning*

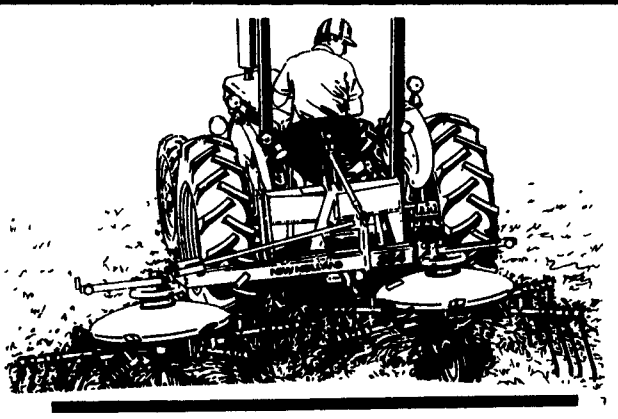
FLEXIBILITY



THE TEDDER THAT RAKES

Now, you can rake and ted with the same machine - the New Holland Model 254 rake tedder. The Model 254 lets you perform a variety of haymaking functions...rake a swath into a windrow, rake two windrows into one, turn windrows, and move crop away from treelines and fences. And, without tools you can convert the Model 254 into a tedder that will fluff up wet, matted-down crop for quick drying.

Stop In today. Let us show you the flexibility of the New Holland Model 254 rake tedder!

Belarus

8011L • 81 HP

BELARUS VALUE. IN MORE WAYS THAN ONE.

Introducing two big changes in how small jobs get done. The 8011L and 9011L offer a low clearance design and tight turning radius that provide even higher levels of maneuverability. Yet they still manage to offer the same durability, value and affordability you expect from Belarus.

Choose from the 8011L and its tough 81 hp four cylinder water cooled engine or the 9011L's turbo charged 98 hp. Both engines have strong torque characteristics. Add it all up and you've got utility tractors ideal for every type of operation from orchards and vineyards to poultry operations and grounds maintenance.

But the exceptional value doesn't stop there. The 8011L and 9011L offer excellent lift capacity for front end loader applications. Other impressive features include power assisted steering and a fully adjustable seat for operator comfort and convenience.

Combined with their ease of maintenance and servicing, it's not hard to see how Belarus makes even the smallest jobs easier in a big way. That's Belarus value.

PURINA DAIRY HERD PROFILE

At the family dairy farm of Keith and Theresa McCool and their three children, Christiana, 17; Alicia, 15; and Andrew, 12; they house 54 Holsteins in a conventional barn with a pipeline milking system. The 140 acre rented farm located just outside of Selinsgrove provides the backdrop for a 23,010 rolling herd average and individual cows that milk up to 140 pounds per day and includes the 2nd high individual record in Snyder county last year.

But with all this production Keith does not believe in pushing excessive grain to his cows. A 15-year customer of Purina Mills Inc., his feeding program revolves around a TMR mix that includes shelled corn and the best corn silage and haylage that is possible to make in spite of the weather challenges of the past year. The concentrate to balance this TMR mix for the average producing cow in the herd is 24 pounds per day of Purina's Ultimate EXT. The higher producers may get extra Ultimate but never more than an additional five pounds regardless of how high they go in production.

I like to feed the best Purina has to offer but I don't like to push grain," Keith said. "Purina packs a lot of density into their feeds and with the balance this gives our home-grown TMR mix, we can make a lot of milk without feeding an excessive amount of grain."

Keith believes you need to look at performance outcomes rather than input costs to determine profitability. And it's profit that Keith wants.

"I like milking cows, but I want to get all the milk I can," Keith said. "I'm not going through the motions here just for the fun of it. We put enough time in the barn that we want to get enough milk production to make a reasonable living."

And it is this philosophy that keeps Keith on the customer list of Purina. His profit over feed costs is $1,990 per cow per year and his feed cost per 100 pounds of milk produced is $5.71. His heifers freshen at 23 to 25 months and have a mature equivalent of 25,000 lbs.

"I recommend Purina because their feed works," Keith said. There are dairymen I know who could help themselves if they switched to Purina because they are not making the milk they should. Sure, I would like to see Purina go in there because they could help the guy."

And Keith should know. For the last 15 years, his production has improved right along with Purina's technology. And he believes his association with Purina will insure improvements in the future as well.
